Introduction.

IN the following pages an attempt is made to record all existing Inscriptions in the Cathedral and its Churchyard; also to collect from all sources Epitaphs no longer remaining.

In all cases copies have been taken from the original stones by the author's own hands, as accurately as possible. (Note 1.) This work has been attended with great difficulty in consequence of the decayed state of many stones, or the unskilful repainting of numerous tablets. Doubtless there have been many other inscriptions destroyed at various times, of which no record remains. This remark applies not only to ancient stones, but to many placed in the Churchyard within the last hundred years. The following order of arrangement, which was deemed the simplest, has been followed in these pages :—

I. Epitaphs of the Bishops of Hereford.
II. „ Deans of the Cathedral.
III. All others in Alphabetical order.

It has been found convenient to adopt abbreviations of the names of the various parts of the Cathedral, also of the authorities to whom frequent reference is made. A table of these will be given, and a general index will complete the volume. A description of the Monuments is occasionally, but not generally, given; otherwise this work would be largely increased. Notes are added, stating facts oftentimes trivial, but worthy, it is hoped, of permanent record.

The Illustrations consist chiefly of Heraldic remains and other Monumental objects of antiquarian interest. Three ground plans have been prepared which indicate the present positions of all the most important Monuments and Epitaphs.

For the modern Heraldry which brightens these pages I would express my gratitude for the assistance received in the production, as specially due to the Right Hon. and Ven. Lord Saye and Sele, the Hon. and Very Reverend The Dean of Hereford, and Sir Joseph Bailey, Bart., M.P., for the County of Hereford.

To Mr. Robert Clarke, of Hereford, Architectural Sculptor, I am under special obligation for the great and unwearied interest he has taken in the preparation of most of the Illustrations. Without his assistance, frequent and gratuitous as it has been, the pictorial portion of this volume would never have been produced.

I must also record the important assistance I have received from Stephen Tucker, Esq., Somerset Herald. To him I am indebted for correct drawings of the modern Heraldry, and for much valuable information and advice. To those many friends and subscribers whose names are appended, I beg to offer my best thanks for their support; trusting that they will extend much indulgence to me for the many defects they may discover in the attempt now made to collect and rescue from oblivion, the whole of the sepulchral epitaphs in the Cathedral of St. Mary and St. Ethelbert.

Note 1.—Those who may think that the work of copying is a simple and easy matter should spend half an hour in the corner of the Bishop's Cloister, or over Bishop Bisse's epitaph, or Andrew Jones's tomb in the Crypt. A due estimate may then be formed of the tedious nature of such work.

Places for Burial.

About the year 750 A.D. Archbishop Cuthbert introduced the practice of enclosures near to the Churches or Monasteries for the burial of the dead. Hence the origin of Churchyards. Before this time the dead had usually been interred near highways, according to the custom of the Romans, or in burial places remote from the cities. (A.) It was, however, an early custom to bury persons of high rank in the Porch and outer buildings of a Church; subsequently persons of inferior quality were admitted thereto. The threshold of the Church itself was soon crossed by Ecclesiastics generally, and Laymen were not long in obtaining the privilege of burial within the walls of Churches. (B.) In this Cathedral we cannot point to any Saxon or early Norman place of burial. Bishop Athelstan (ob: 1056 A.D.) is said to have been buried in his Cathedral. (See the Saxon Chronicle; also Florence of Worcester, Vol. I., p. 214.) Dingley, 188, gives a sketch of his supposed Tomb. Several ancient graves have been discovered near the "Magdalen Chapels"; an interesting drawing of one of them remains in the Library. (C.)

It will be observed that our Bishops, as soon as the Norman edifice arose, were always buried inside its walls. What arrangements were made for the interment of other persons in those early times we know not. The Cathedral, with its large staff of Dignitaries, Prebendaries, Vicars, and others, was the principal place of burial for successive generations of these ecclesiastics. Few distinguished Laymen were buried here in consequence of the attractions of other monastic houses in the immediate vicinity. The great rival of the Cathedral was the Church of the Blackfriars, which has now altogether disappeared.

In early times it was considered to be the highest honour to be buried near the High Altar; this privilege was for a long time guarded most carefully. Bishops or Dignitaries only were buried beneath effigies, or within arched recesses. Other Ecclesiastics adopted sepulchral slabs, which at a later period were enriched with brass work of ever varying design.

That burials took place in the Cloisters at an early period is more than probable. Six stone effigies of Lay persons, formerly there, are now in the Cathedral; and a Sub-treasurer was buried at the entrance of the Chapter House in 1375. (D.) It is also certain that the northern side of the Cathedral was used for burial purposes. Several early documents in the Cathedral archives relate to disputes between the Chapter and the Citizens respecting the boundaries. Whether the Churchyard was used by the inhabitants of St. John Baptist's parish, or by citizens generally cannot now be easily determined. Numerous burials also took place near the College. The Vicar's Cloister was used as a burial place soon after its erection for members of the College, but many of the Vicars Choral were buried where they held preferment. In the Crypt no other burials are known to have taken place besides that of Andrew Jones and wife, A.D. 1497. The Transepts and eastern Aisles were used during the 17th and 18th Centuries for a large number of those who could afford the higher fees, while outside, the whole area was so completely filled with the dead that it was necessary to close the Churchyard, in the year 1791. (E.)

C. "A saw pit was sometime since dug out, A.D. 1837–38, on the site of the ancient Chapel of the Magdalen's. A drawing of which, representing a stone coffin with a lid engraved with a foliated cross, is preserved in the Cathedral Library." Extract from a paper by Dean Merewether.

D.—See also inscription to John de la Halle.

E.—In the "Gentleman's Magazine," June 24, 1796, the following statement appears:—"They write from Hereford, that in consequence of an order of the Dean and Chapter, all the tomb-stones and grave-stones in the Cathedral yard were levelled and removed, in the presence of an assembled multitude, who could not refrain from venting their grief at this outrage offered in a civilized and Christian country, to the memorials of their relations. . . . . It is even added, that a subscription is set on foot to try if redress cannot be obtained in a court of law.'

It appears that on Sept. 11th, 1790, the Dean and Chapter sent a communication to the Incumbents of the several parishes within the City and the Suburbs thereof, to the following effect :—"That having seriously considered the state of the Minster Churchyard and that of the Lady Arbour, the only places of interment in this populous city, how greatly crowded they are, and have been, with Bodies, having great reason to apprehend that some contagious distemper may arise, endangering the health and even the lives of the inhabitants, we have found it necessary to declare, That after March 25, 1791, no bodies can be admitted for sepulture here, except such as shall happen to die within the Precincts," &c.

Throughout the former part of this century occasional burials took place in vaults, the last being that of Mr. John Davies, the aged Verger, in 1874. The last burial inside the Cathedral was Lieut. A. J. Grey, R.N., in 1854. But the last body deposited in the Cathedral was in 1867, when the remains of Bishop Ironside were removed from London. So completely was the interior of the Church undermined and the foundations injured by vaults, that it became necessary to lay down a thick bed of concrete beneath the whole of the present pavement, A.D. 1860–62. I cannot forbear adding the words of a highly gifted living writer, to whom in boyhood's days, for nearly two years, I listened with wonder and delight. "What a venerable and fearful place is a Church, in and around which the dead are deposited! Truly it is chiefly sacred, as being the spot where God has for ages manifested Himself to His Servants; but add to this the thought that it is the actual resting-place of those very servants through successive times who still live unto Him." J. H. Newman's Sermons, I., 322.

Extract from a paper read by Dean Merewether, circa 1840, "I will proceed to resume the subject previously introduced to your notice, namely, the remarkable assemblage of ancient interments which our Cathedral and its precincts contain. We possess within our walls the ashes of no less than 36 of those who have occupied the station and function of the successors of the Apostles of our Lord, and whatever might have been the conduct or the doctrinal error in which the ministry of some of them was executed, yet throughout the list are to be found the names of pious and devoted men, to some of whom we owe the splendid fabric which shields their bones. It is difficult in the presence of their remains to divest the mind of a sensation of peculiar solemnity and grateful veneration. Without enumerating their names it may suffice to remind you that we can point out the grave of the first of the series of the date 1079, whilst, probably, indeed doubtlessly, many of an earlier date have mouldered away in the same sanctuary, like those whom we described as being unquestionably of Saxon days, in our last notice,—but where so many Prelates had sought their final resting place, it is reasonable to suppose that the place would acquire an estimation of peculiar sanctity,—and that aided by the impressions of the times upon such subjects, the great and good would alike desire that their bones should rest in such hallowed communion."

Modes of Burial.

Considerable care must have been bestowed on the preparation of the dead for burial at an early period. Otherwise they could not have been buried in the most sacred parts of our great Churches throughout the kingdom. It was usual in Norman times to bury great personages inside the Church only, just beneath the level of the floor, or above that level when the body was placed in a stone chest. Much is certainly known respecting the means adopted to preserve the bodies of our English monarchs and other great persons from an early period. Full details are given in such works as Gough's "Sepulchral Monuments," the "Liber Regalis," deposited in Westminster Abbey, the "Archæologia," or by Mr. M. H. Bloxham, in his "Monumental Architecture," and other works. But present remarks are confined to Hereford, as it is necessary to keep this wide subject within narrow limits. We do not know what means were adopted to prepare the bodies of our Norman Bishops for interment. I am not aware that any of their tombs have been opened or examined. It was usual to remove the inner part of the body; after a careful washing it was soaked in vinegar or saturated with salt. It was then encased in hides or leather, or it was regularly embalmed with spices and aromatic gums, &c. Sometimes cere-cloths only covered the body, or a liquid pickle was used when leaden coffins were adopted. These were not common until the XV. Century. Bishop Swinfield A.D. 1316, lies encased in lead which is fitted to the body resembling the shape of an Egyptian mummy. Lime or charcoal do not appear to have been used in our early graves. Stone coffins hewn out of a single block, with a recess for the head, and a small circular orifice about the centre, in the bottom, were common during the XIII. Century. A fine specimen may be seen in the N. Transept. These were seldom of the same width throughout, but tapered gradually from the head to the feet. Shortly after that time oblong chests of equal width throughout came into use. In all cases great care was bestowed on the remains of ecclesiastics previous to burial; the funeral ceremonies were conducted with much solemnity, the pomp and splendour being varied according to the rank and wealth of the deceased. Each ecclesiastic was carried to the grave by those who held the same rank in the church as himself. Those of superior, were not allowed to carry the clergy of inferior degree, nor were the clergy ever permitted to carry the bodies of the laity. The nobility, and eminent persons, were buried with great solemnities, especially in the XV. and XVI. Centuries; the proceedings sometimes extending over several days. Whether embalmed or not, the bodies of Bishops were dressed in their episcopal robes, generally with the Pastoral Staff, ring and other things appertaining to their rank, and sometimes with a chalice and paten, according to the fashion of the age. The body was usually placed in a light wooden shell which fitted the inside of the stone chest or coffin. Those of inferior grade were buried in their respective vestments, with the chalice and paten on the breast. Several specimens of these are preserved in the Library, the metal being a kind of pewter.

The bodies of middle-class persons were sometimes buried in coffins of which the lid was angular in shape, though many were interred without coffins at all, The bodies of the common people so lately as the XVI. Century were only enveloped in a shroud, and thus buried. We have no interments of hearts in this Church, as customary in the middle ages, but we know where those of Bishops Le Breton and Cantilupe were deposited. Many of the later interments were in coffins of lead, but no regulations seem to have required their general adoption.

Monuments.

The earliest monumental stones remaining in this Church are to be seen in the N. E. Transept. (Illustration XVIII.) These are portions of flat coffin lids, of varied size and design, which belong to the XII. and former part of the XIII. Centuries. There are many other specimens of these early stones incorporated into the fabric. The head of an effigy in armour, a solitary remnant of that class, is also fixed on the W. Wall of the N. E. Transept. A change in the shape of stone coffins gradually took place soon after the middle of the XIII. Century; equal width throughout being adopted. Shallow incised slabs were in use before the introduction of brasses. (F.) Our earliest episcopal Monument

Note F.—See Ground Plan, No. 35B.

with its effigy, is a most beautiful and elaborate production, constructed (as supposed) by Bishop Aquablanca himself during lifetime, circa 1245–68. (G.) The next important Monument is the stonework erection pertaining to the Shrine of St. Thomas de Cantilupe in the N. Transept. Bishop Swinfield's tomb is probably the earliest of the numerous burials beneath mural arcades or canopies. Shortly after this period the series of effigies (ten in number) was introduced where the Norman Bishops are rightly supposed to be buried. Other effigies were from time to time adopted. (H.) Altar Tombs were adopted in the XIV. Century, but were never numerous in this Cathedral. The sides were usually embellished with quatrefoil compartments, or small canopied niches containing statues. (J.) Slabs with inlaid Brasses were very popular and numerous in this Church in the XV. and XVI. Centuries. As art declined the Monuments became more imposing in size, while abuses of all kinds crept in. Before the time of Queen Elizabeth there was a distinctly religious character about the Monuments of all kinds; the attitude was invariably that of prayer. The posture of later effigies was changed to that of meditation, and numerous incongruities—of which no further mention need be made—came into fashion. (K.) Although vast changes were made within this edifice, and much destructive violence was applied to everything which was thought to be idolatrous, it is marvellous that our Monuments escaped as well as they did. We have numerous examples of a wanton defacing of the pious works of former times; but whether these were the works of the Reformers or of Puritan fanatics under Cromwell cannot now be easily determined. The object of the Reformers was, generally speaking, to purify, not to desecrate; while on the other hand the Puritans were not satisfied, unless desecration was accompanied by demolition. (L.) Most of our effigies bear traces of violence having been applied generally to the heads and hands. In the enthusiastic hatred of all church ornaments, the Cathedrals were exposed to rapine, plunder, and profanation. But at Hereford there does not appear to have been any disturbance of the remains of the dead. After the Commonwealth, interments were numerous, especially in the Transepts

H.—There are many valuable remarks in Haines' "Introduction Mon: Brasses." He says, "Sculptured Effigies hold the first rank, by reason of their higher antiquity, their greater size, and the labour, skill, and taste required for their execution. On account of their costliness they were chiefly confined to persons of rank and wealth. Figures of Priests below the dignity of Abbots, and of civilians, are rare. They were almost always coloured, although few of them now retain any traces of it." The following is a list of the 41 Monumental Effigies in the Cathedral. See Nos. in Ground Plan. 29 Ecclesiastics, ancient and modern.—Nos. 1, 5, 6, 10, 11, 14, 16, 18, 19, 21, 23, 25, 31, 35A, 40, 47, 50, 51, 60, 61, 67, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 78, 82, 83. 10 Lay persons.—Nos. 27 (5 effigies), 35, 41, 77 (2 effigies), 84. 2 Half Effigies—Nos. 9, 56.

J.—The principal Tombs with canopies, or rich side panels, are Nos. 8, 11, 21, 29, 67, 76. Of Lay persons, Nos. 40, 77.

K.—Mr. Matthew H. Bloxham states that the various Monuments of the XVII. Century may be included in one or other of the following classes:—

I.—Altar Tombs, or sarcophagi with effigies beneath semi-circular arcades, generally Corinthian.

II.—Tombs or sarcophagi beneath square heavy canopies of Corinthian order, ponderous structures.

III.—Altar Tombs, with or without canopies, with effigies reclining on their side; along the sides of many, small effigies of children kneel on cushions, males in succession on the one side, females opposite on the other.

IV.—Upright monuments with small-sized effigies kneeling before faldstool.

V.—Brasses with inlaid portraitures, altogether inferior in detail to those of more ancient date.

VI.—Monuments with busts.

VII.—Full length effigies, recumbent, kneeling, or reclining.

VIII.—Mural tablets—not common until after the Restoration—or flat engraven stones.

IX.—Churchyard altar tombs and headstones, not often found of an earlier date than 1670.

and eastern parts of the building. Many mural monuments were erected, and inscribed stones continued to fill the pavement. Much injury was caused to these stones when the marble pavement was laid in the Choir, and during the progress of other extensive works in the time of Bishop Bisse. In the Cloisters additions were constantly made to the tablets and gravestones, and in the Churchyard a large number of headstones and low Tombs were from time to time erected. After the fall of the western Tower in 1786 extensive works were undertaken which lasted for several years. During this period great injury was done to countless memorials of the dead. Many stones were broken or removed, brasses were torn up and sold as old metal, and several of the Tombs and Effigies were removed unnecessarily to other parts of the Church by Mr. Wyatt. Many of these have been replaced in their original positions.

There does not appear to have been further disturbance until about 40 years ago, when the Crypt was excavated and the soil of the Churchyard lowered considerably. This involved the taking down of all the Tombs and headstones, very few of which now remain. Inside the Cathedral vast preparations were made to shore up the piers of the central Tower, which was pronounced to be in a state of imminent danger. All Monuments under or near the Tower were hastily taken down, and the remains of the dead were removed to a common receptacle in the centre of the Nave. (M.) The Monuments thus taken down were heaped with some degree of order in the S. E. Transept, and remained there several years. There is no doubt that their complete restoration was intended at some future time, had Dean Merewether lived a few years longer. The smaller Tablets were stored in the Crypt in comparative safety, until it was resolved to fix them on the walls of the Bishop's Cloisters in 1866. In 1853, when my connection with the Cathedral commenced, the whole of the inscribed stones were placed outside the S. Transept; while thousands of fragments of most costly monuments were to be seen in hopeless confusion in the Chapter House Yard. (N.) The sum of £500 was provided by the Dean and Chapter to effect the present arrangement of the Monuments inside the Cathedral, while several inscriptions have been restored by private assistance.

Of the following costly Episcopal Tombs little now remains, besides the effigy or inscription:—5, Westfaling; 9, Field; 18, Bennett; 50, Lewis Charlton; 51, Coke; 60, Lindsell; Near 73, Bisse; 80, Tyler (Dean of Hereford).

In the Report of the Sepulchral Monuments Committee, presented to both Houses of Parliament in 1872, the following Historical Monuments were deemed worthy of being placed under the protection and supervision of the Government:—Nos. 6, 8, 12, 21, 50, 67, 84.

There is a valuable essay on the Preservation of Monumental Inscriptions by T. W. King, Rouge Dragon (Arch: Journ: I., 135), in which the gentry and clergy are exhorted to a zealous and watchful care over the monumental records of families. The concluding remarks refer to the removal of a stone from Stoneleigh Church some years previously, which in 1828 would have afforded important evidence when the claim to the Barony of Leigh was brought before the House of Lords. "This case"—the writer observes—"exhibits one of those instances of the want of similar care in the preservation of family sepulchral monuments, in which not only a title of peerage, but claim to property was deeply involved."

Note M.—See Ground Plan, No. 111.

N.—The sight of such a wreck of Monuments was a truly strange and grievous one. My first care was to rescue this and many other interesting fragments, shields, &c., by placing them inside the Church. The alabaster half-effigy of Bishop Field was exposed on the top of the heap. With the assistance of a friend (Mr. J. T. Owen Fowler, late Mayor of Hereford) this effigy was conveyed to its original position. After exposure for several years, many pieces were lost, broken, or removed, so that it was deemed advisable to consign the remnants to an excavation prepared on the spot for that purpose. See Ground Plan of C.H.Y. marked J.

Inscriptions.

"The shortest, plainest, and truest epitaphs are best," saith honest Fuller. "For when a passenger sees a chronicle written on a tomb, he takes it on trust that some great man lies there buried, without taking pains to examine who he is. I say also, the plainest, for except the sense lie above ground, few will trouble themselves to dig for it." On the earliest Monumental stones few words, if any, were ever inscribed. The name and rank of the deceased were alone recorded, the date being rarely given until XIV. Century. The early inscriptions had but little variety of language or sentiment, but they were always striking and solemn, flowing naturally from the faith then professed. They generally expressed that deep humility which is altogether wanting in many later examples. We have no perfect specimen at Hereford, but the fragments in the N. E. Transept are worthy of careful examination. A large number of these ancient stones have been discovered in Parish Churches of this Diocese restored during the last 40 years.

In many Churches these ancient memorials are preserved with most laudable care; while in others they are turned out of doors, simply to perish, their place in the pavement being filled up with modern encaustic tiles altogether devoid of interest or beauty.

As time advanced, coped stones or flat slabs were gradually enriched with raised carving or incised work of much skill and beauty, the cross always being the leading idea. Medallions were introduced on monumental stones with diminutive heads or effigies, which speedily developed into the full effigy. Latin was the universal language for Inscriptions until the latter part of the XIII. Century, when Norman-French came into fashion for a limited time. Of these we had a few examples. (o.) Our oldest remaining inscription is on the Tomb of Bishop Swinfield, A.D. 1316. See Plate IV. Dingley asserts (CLIV.) that there was one yet earlier on the Tomb of Bishop Acquablanca, A.D. 1268. The introduction of brass work on monumental stones increased the number of inscriptions in our Churches very largely. At first they were very brief, but at a later period they were much expanded. The simple "Priez pour sa alme," of Centuries XII. and XIII., and the "Orate pro animâ," of the XIV. Century prevailed; and occasionally some holy text or important truth was brought forward, conveying an impressive lesson to the bystander. There was nothing trifling or ludicrous—says Johnson (P.)—nothing that did not tend to the noblest end, the propagation of piety, and the increase of devotion. These short but solemn mediæval inscriptions, when contrasted with those which derive their merit from their classical elegance, seem to harmonise best with the dignity of our Gothic piles, and remind us plainly of the worship to which they are dedicated. We read these solemn supplications for pardon and mercy, as voices from the grave, and are admonished by them that we are but dust.

Towards the close of Century XVI. a great change took place in the general character and specially in the length of inscriptions. Long pompous epitaphs in Latin, so frequent during Century XVII., came into use. This lengthiness possibly arose from religion being viewed more in its human than in its divine relations. The Cross was forgotten—self was commended—long epitaphs, proverbially false and incredible, appeared; men's virtues, not Christ's merits,—what they have done, not what they need or have left undone,—make up a pompous record, seldom read and never believed! Other epitaphs frequently amounted to little more than an enumeration of preferments or political services, a mixture of spiritual and secular affairs, graces and titles, in a word, God and Mammon.

Epitaphs on eminent divines are sometimes diffusive, and generally too secular and laudatory, involving the talents and virtues of the deceased in a maze of classical panegyric. In that secular age the language of assurance rather than of hope was too often adopted, forgetting that the Church ventures only thus to express herself even of the most excellent of the earth. No wonder then that many holy men requested that no monument should be set up to their memory. These pages testify that several of our own Dignitaries were buried here without any memorial. Bishop Sanderson (Q.) directed in his Will, "that no costly monument be erected for my memory, but only a fair flat marble stone to be laid over me." And Sir H. Wootton directed his executors to "lay over his grave a marble stone, plain and not costly,—considering that time moulders even marble to dust, for monuments themselves must die." Of Sir Matthew Hale it is said, that "his tombstone was like himself, decent and plain, with a bare and humble inscription." (R.) Of such monumental stones those to the memory of Bishops Croft, Humphreys, and Ironside, are excellent examples. For historical and genealogical purposes old inscriptions are of the utmost value, giving as they do facts and dates which no Registers supply. The inscriptions in these pages have in all cases been copied from the original Monuments or stones. Lost portions, printed in italic, are made up from the authorities quoted. It is scarcely possible to state where many of the tablets were originally fixed which are now in the Bishop's Cloister. Their present position is indicated as nearly as possible in most cases. These remarks apply also to the stones in the Chapter House Yard. Neither is it possible to reproduce the punctuation which has perished on many painted tablets, or to set out the same in lines of varied length as in the originals. The greatest care has been taken to give accurate copies of all inscriptions, which work was commenced in 1856, and gradually carried on until 1874. On retracing my steps over all in 1880, it was found that several inscriptions were gone—simply perished or destroyed, while others were partially obliterated, or far advanced in decay.

P.—Johnson's "Essay on Epitaphs," vol. v., 264, which originally appeared in the "Gentleman's Magazine," 1740.

Public Memorials.

There are twelve Public Memorials in this Cathedral, which demand a few words of explanation, further details being given in the Visitor's Hand Guide. (S.) The order of their erection is now followed; the inscriptions will be found in subsequent pages.

I.—Richard Jones Powell, of Hinton Court, Esquire, Recorder of this City. Died 1834. Monument in Caen stone designed by N. J. Cottingham, Architect, several years later. It was erected in S. Choir Aisle, where the Map is now placed. The carved angel with expanded wings, being considered unsatisfactory, this Monument was removed in 1861, to the South Cloister, Bay 14.

II.—John Hunt, Organist of this Cathedral, ob: November, 1842. A stained glass window of two lights in N. Choir Aisle; also a brass plate in pavement. This Memorial was raised chiefly through the exertions of Archdeacon Freer.

III.—John Merewether, D.D., Dean of this Church, ob: April, 1850. Five windows containing 21 medallions illustrating the Life of Our Lord; erected in 1852. Designed by N. J. Cottingham. Artist, Charles A. Gibbs, London.

IV.—Joseph Bailey, Esquire, M.P., ob: August, 1850. The Reredos of Caen stone (5 richly carved panels) and polished marbles, designed by N. J. Cottingham. Artist,

W. Boulton. A granite pedestal, bearing an inscription, with a white marble bust was erected at the back of the Reredos, but this in 1861 was removed to a central position in the Shire Hall. Sculptor, J. Evan Thomas. The inscription was replaced by a brass plate now fixed on the pillar behind the Reredos.

V.—Thomas Musgrave, D.D., Bishop of Hereford, afterwards Archbishop of York, ob: May, 1860. A large 4-light window in N. Choir Aisle, filled with stained glass, illustrating the Life of St. Paul; also two small windows in the Stanbury Chantry, with a brass plate. Artist, J. Warrington.

VI.—Richard Lane Freer, D.D., Archdeacon of Hereford, ob: August, 1863. The large window in the N. Transept filled with stained glass, representing the Church Militant and the Church Triumphant. Artists, Messrs. Hardman. Also a large brass plate fixed on the wall beneath.

VII.—Richard Dawes, A.M., Dean of this Church, ob: March, 1867. Altar Tomb of alabaster and marble, with full sized recumbent effigy in N. E. Transept. Designed by Sir G. G. Scott, R.A. Artists, Brindley and Richards. Sculptor, J. Noble, R.A.

VIII.—Henry Arkwright, Esquire, Captain 84th Regiment, ob: October, 1866. A stained glass window of 3 lights in N. T. Aisle. Also a brass plate with inscription. Artist, Wailes, of Newcastle.

IX.—Samuel Clarke, M.A., Rector of Eaton Bishop, ob: July, 1875. A stained glass window of 3 lights in N. T. Aisle. Also a brass plate with inscription. Artists, Clayton and Bell, London.

X.—William Waring, M.A., Canon Residentiary and Archdeacon of Ludlow (T.), ob: March, 1877. Mural brass plate and cross in corner of S. Transept. Artist, Kell (late Rattee), of Cambridge.

XI.—John Goss, M.A., Custos of the College, and Vicar of the Parish of St. John Baptist. Stained glass window of 4 lights in N. E. Transept, representing the Visit of the Magi and the Baptism of Christ. Also a brass plate with inscription. Artists, Heaton. Butler, and Bayne, London.

XII.—Military Memorial, 36th Regiment (Herefordshire), recording the names of 346 Officers and Men who died on service from August, 1865, to December, 1875. A large brass plate fixed on the wall of the S. Aisle of Nave. (U.)

Registers.

It may be well to state in these pages precisely what Registers are to be found at Hereford. Frequently this Cathedral is regarded as a storehouse of much that relates to ancient times—that many old Registers are in the Episcopal or Decanal archives of inestimable value to the genealogist. Great indeed has been the disappointment of many inquirers when the true state of matters was laid before them. The value of the Inscriptions in these pages is greatly enhanced by the fact that the Cathedral Registers only commence in the year 1686, and the Parochial Registers of St. John Baptist in 1604. The oldest Bishop's Register commences A.D. 1275, recording only Diocesan proceedings. The valuable and early documents in the possession of the Dean and Chapter in no way refer to burial matters, with the exception of those now enumerated. It is my belief that these Burial Registers were in the sole charge of the Vicars Choral until the year 1853 or 1854. The two junior Vicars were responsible for the burials entered therein, and they received the fees payable to the Officiating Minister. This duty was discharged by the author of these pages when the last burial took place inside the Cathedral on May 2nd, 1854.

Note T.—Archdeacon Waring was generally known as "Archdeacon of Salop," but the title was changed by Order in Council dated March 24, 1876, to that of Ludlow.

Registers in possession of the Dean and Chapter of Hereford.

BAPTISMS.—There are no old Registers. There is a single entry in 1807, probably one or two others. The Register for those residing in the Precincts only, extends from 1813 to the present time.

MARRIAGES.—I. 1686 to Dec., 1727.
II. 1727 to Jan., 1743.
III. Feb., 1743, to March. 1754.

BURIALS.—The following only are recorded before the year 1813, from extra parochial and other places.

1730, Aug. 5. William Griffiths, Apparitor from the Palace. Thomas Whitmore, of Haywood, Esq. W. Symonds, of Breinton.

1732, March 15. Mrs. Mary Whitmore, of Haywood.

1735, May 27. Thomas Apperley, Dr. of Physick, was buried from Grafton, by George Phelps.

The only other Register of Burials is from 1813 to 1867.

Registers belonging to the Parish of St. John Baptist.

There are seven volumes in a good state of preservation, containing Baptisms, Weddings, and Burials from A.D. 1604 to 1812. The usual modern Registers are complete to the present time.

Notes from the Burial Register of the Parish of St. John Baptist.

Theophilus Alley, Aturney at Law, was buried ye 28 day of Jan., 1704.

John Clark, Prebind, dyed 9th day of Dec., 1712.

A.D. 1730. Mr. William Griffiths was buried August 6th, from the Palace. Thomas Whitmore, Esq., was buried August 7th, from the Haywood. Mem: The two persons above registered, Mr. G. and Mr. W., are entered (as I am told) in ye Cathedral Register by order of ye Bishop of Hereford.

Henry Swarbrick, organist, June 23. 1754.

Rev. Mr. William Willim, Lecturer of ye Cathedral, August 20, 1767.

Mrs. Sarah Croft, relict of Mr. Thomas Croft, Register, buried Dec 12, 1769.

Thomas Croft, Proctor, May 7, 1766.

1777. Baptism of Mary and William, children of John and Mary Shakespear.

1783. The operation of the Act (which took place on Oct. 1) requiring three pence to be paid for each Baptism, Wedding, and Funeral, ceased on the 1st of October last, 1794.

Rev. Canon Whishaw, May 25, 1780.
(There is a portrait of this Canon in the Library, presented by R. Walond, Treasurer, 1831.)

Rev. Dr. John Stone, June 4, 1783.

Mrs. Apperley, Dec. 28, 1780.

Right Hon. Lord James Beauclerk, Bishop, Oct. 29, 1787.

1795. No Parishioner buried in the Churchyard this year.

Rev. Dr. Thomas Luntley, Ap. 16, 1800.

Mrs. Anne Russell, w. of Dr. T. R., buried in the Cathedral.

Rt. Rev. Dr. Butler was buried Dec. 20, 1802.

Mrs. Anne Butler, his widow, Jan. 27, 1804.

Joseph Trumper, in Lady Harbour, Sep. 28, 1809.

Sarah Cox, in the Cathedral, Nov. 9. 1811.

There is no record of ages in these Registers until the year 1812.

Statutes of the Cathedral.

The Constitution is a Corporation aggregate, governed by the Caroline Statutes—
A.D. 1636—and by ancient custom in such matters as are not regulated by those Statutes.

In the year 1870 certain Injunctions or Statutes, more particularly regarding the Vicars Choral, Ministers, and others of the College of Vicars Choral of Hereford, were promulgated by the Dean and Residentiaries with the consent of the General Chapter of the Cathedral Church, and the sanction of the Lord Bishop of Hereford the Visitor.

PLATE IX.

Monumental Ground Plan of the North Transept.

THIS Ground Plan, so far as it relates to Tombstones 1 to 47, is a reduced facsimile of an old document in the possession of Mr. Theophilus Lane, of the City of Hereford. It gives "the position of Graves in the North Transept of Hereford Cathedral, as apparent about the year 1800."

The following is a true copy of the information given in this Ground Plan, which will in future pages be referred to as "Lane's G.P."

Nineteen of these Monumental Stones (printed below in italics) are not to be found. Many other burials took place in this part of the Church, from an early period not indicated in this plan. Few, if any, burials took place there after 1800, as the whole Transept was by that time filled with pews for the Parishioners of St. John Baptist.

King Ethelbert.

AN ancient stone effigy of this King and Martyr stands erect on a bracket on the South side of the eastern bay of the Choir,* near the head of Bishop Mayo's tomb.

In 1875 a slab of incised Sienna marble was laid down in the centre of the pavement in front of the Bishop's Throne depicting the scene of the murder. Around is the following inscription—

"Saint Ethelbert is beheaded by order of Offa King of Mercia DCCꝟCƷƷ."

* For illustration and full particulars see Fasti Heref: page 110. The original Will of this Bishop having come into my possession by purchase, I am enabled to give the following extract:

"Imprimis lego etiam meum omnipotenti Deo corpus q~ meum sepeliend~ in Ecclesia mea Cath~ Herefordensis ad pedes Imaginis domini et gloriosi Regis et Martiris Ethelberti."

Bishops of Hereford.

NOTHING is known of the burial places of the Bishops of Hereford in Anglo Saxon times. It is only natural to suppose, that they sought for resting places as near as possible to their own Cathedral. No Burials were allowed within the precincts of towns before the middle of the eighth Century.

Our 5th Bishop, Cuthbert (A.D. 736–40) erected "tumulum magnificum" to his predecessors in this See (Note 1.)

When he became Archbishop of Canterbury, he obtained permission from the Pope to allow Cemeteries to be contiguous to those Churches which were erected within the walls of Cities (A.D. 752.)

During the three following centuries none were ever buried inside a church unless the deceased was of the highest rank.

In Norman times Bishops and great ecclesiastics were generally buried inside the churches which they had built or endowed.

Our last Saxon Bishop is the first of whom there is a clear record that his burial took place inside the Cathedral he had built (Note 2.)

25. Ethelstan, died at Bosbury, February 10, A.D. 1056. "His body was carried to Hereford and interr'd in his Church there." (Note 3.)

27. Walter of Lorraine, died A.D. 1079, and is said to have been buried in this Cathedral. (Note 4.)

28. Robert of Lorraine or de Lozing, died June, 1095, "and lieth buried on the South side of the High Altar, under an Arch of Free stone, in the north wall of that Isle," (R. 175) bearing the following inscription—"Dominus Robertus Lozing, Ep~us Herefordensis, obiit A.D. 1095." (Note 5.)

30. Reinhelm or Reynelm, died October, 1115. Buried in the N. aisle of the Choir, under an arch and effigy with this inscription—"Dominus Reynelmus, Ep~us Herefordensis, ob: A.D. 1117."

Note 1. "Qui quondam extiterant famosi altique per orbem,
Corpora sena tenet hominum hic marmor obumbrans;
Tumbaque mirifico præsens fabricata decore,
Desuper ex alto cohibet cum culmine tecta.
Hos ego Cudbertus sacri successor honoris,
Inclusi titulis, exornavique sepulchris.
Pontifices ex his ternos sancta infula cinxit,
Nomina sunt quorum Walhstodus, Torthere, Tirhtil.
Regulus est quartus Milfrith cum conjuge pulchra
Cuenburga, extitit è senis hæc ordine quinta.
Sextus præterea est Oselmi filius Osfrith."

William of Malmesbury (ob: A.D. 1143) gives the above epitaph in his work "De gestis Pontificum."

2.—The figures placed before the name of a Bishop indicate his place on the succession roll of this See.

3.—I am not aware that any author described the precise spot of this Bishop's interment, until Dingley's "History from Marble" appeared in 1876. On page CLXXVI. we find a drawing of a tomb ascribed to "Bishop Ethelstan in ye north wall of ye north Isle." There is no trace of any such monument.

4.—Brown Willis in his Ichnography ascribes the monument in the S. wall of the Nave nearest to the Cloister door, to this Bishop. But our greatest living authority states that the effigy on this tomb shews the ordinary dress of the clergy when not engaged in divine offices—that there are no episcopal insignia whatever—and that it represents a Dean of the XIV. Century. (Mr. M. H. Bloxam on "Sepulchral Effigies," Arch: Journ:, vol 34 for 1877.)

5.—Dingley saw this inscription on this tomb circa, 1684. But it appears that before Rawlinson saw it in 1717 the inscription had been re-painted, altogether erroneously. This "mistake

31. Dom˜us Geoffry de Clive, Ep˜us Herefordensis, obiit A.D. 1119. Buried in the N. aisle of the Choir under an arch and effigy.

32. Dn˜us Richardus de Capella, Ep˜us Hereford˜s, obiit A.D. 1127. Buried under an arch and effigy within the Chantry erected by Bishop Stanberry. Removed from the N. aisle of the Choir when this Chantry was built.

33. Dn˜us Robertus de Bethune, Ep˜us Hereford˜sis, obiit A.D. 1148. Buried under an arch and effigy in the S. aisle of the Choir. (Note 6.)

35. Dom˜us Robertus de Maledon (or de Melun), Ep˜us Hereford˜sis, obiit A.D. 1167. Buried under an arch and effigy in the S. aisle of the Choir.

36. Dom˜us Robertus Ffolliott, Ep˜us Hereford˜sis, obiit A.D. 1176. Buried under an effigy and arch in the S. aisle of the Choir. A modern shield is fixed on the wall above this effigy—Gules, a bend Argent.

37. Dom˜us Gulielmus de Vere, Ep˜us Hereford˜sis, obiit A.D. 1199. Buried under an effigy and arch in S. aisle of the Choir. A modern shield is placed over the effigy of this Bishop—Quarterly, Gu. and Or., in 1st Quarter a mullet Argent

38. Dom˜us Giles de Bruce (or Braose), Ep˜us Hereford˜sis, obiit A.D. 1216. Buried under an effigy in centre of second arch on N. side of the Choir.

39. Dom˜us Hugh de Mapenore, Ep˜us Hereford˜s, obiit A.D. 1219. Buried under an effigy and arch in the N. aisle of the Choir. (Note 7.)

40. Hugh Ffolliott, ob: 1234. The exact place of this Bishop's burial is not known. Possibly he was buried in the N.E. Transept under an arch with ball flower ornament. (Note 8.)

42. Peter d'Aquablanca, ob: A.D. 1268. Buried under a rich effigy and canopied tomb on the N. side of Choir Aisle. There is no inscription remaining. Dingley, CLIV., states that—"The imperfect inscription neer this is,—Dn˜us Peeter de Enguеblanke episcop˜ Hereforde˜sis obiit anno MCCLXVIII. His heart is enclosed in a monument with a superscription at Aquabella in Savoy, the place of his birth, in a monastery of his own foundacion there." (Note 9.)

of the painter" is specially noticed by Rawlinson (p. 175.) I wish to call attention to this fact, which accounts for B. Willis, Gough, and many others assigning this tomb to Bishop Reynelm. Hence much confusion. The S. side of the High Altar was the most likely place for the burial of this great builder of the first Norman Church, and the N. side of the same Altar the next great builder would naturally select for his resting place. At that time the whole eastern bay of the Choir was occupied by the shrine and relics of St. Ethelbert; so that these Norman prelates were buried as near as possible to the High Altar which stood 15 feet (or more) to the West of its present position. Mr. Bloxam gives the following description of the Tomb and effigy, "Beneath a sepulchral arch of the XIV. Century with the ball flower in a hollow moulding, is the recumbent sepulchral effigy of a bishop, executed in the XIV. Century, similar to and of the same class as the four effigies I have thus described, but with a low mitre. The representation of a church is held in the left hand. . . . . This monument to his memory could not have been constructed till nearly two centuries and a half after his decease. Above the sepulchral arch is some decorated woodwork of good character of the XIV. Century."

6.—For details respecting this series of effigies see Arch: Journal XXXIV. 414.

7.—See Dingley CLXXXI.

8.—Bloxam "Sepulchral Effigies," No. 20.

9.—This beautiful monument was designed and carved with consummate skill, and is in a very fair state of preservation. The details of the episcopal vestments are rich. Careful drawings have been taken, and are in the possession of the author. The face of this Bishop exhibits both the moustache and beard. He is vested in alb, stole, tunic, dalmatic, and chesible, with the maniple. Gloves cover the hands, and the feet rest against a canopy. Mr Gordon Hills gives an excellent architectural sketch of this tomb in Arch: Journal, III. 238. XXVII. 21. Archæologia XVIII. 188.

43. John de Breton, ob: A.D. 1275. This Bishop was buried in the Cathedral, but the actual place does not appear to have been recorded. It has been suggested that he was buried in the fine stone coffin—now in the Cantilupe Aisle—which was discovered during the restoration of the Tower piers, under the northern arch. The Coffin may fairly be assigned to that period.

44. Thomas de Cantilupe, ob: A.D. 1282. Dingley, CLV. and CLVII.. gives a sketch of this tomb with the following important information—"On the right hand, ... is seen the following fair monument . . . . of St. Thomas of Cantilupe adorn'd with several small figures about in it coats of maile bearing shields with armes not discernible. Under ye upper arches, were his figure and Inscription inlayd with brass which escaped not the rapine of sacrilegious hands; the onely inscription relating to it is on the wall on the right hand thereof thus. Dn~us Thomas de Cantilupe Ep~us Herefordensis obiit anno d~ni MCCLXXXII." (Note 10.)

45. Richard Swinefield, ob: A.D. 1316. Buried in the N.E. Transept in a stone coffin beneath a richly moulded canopy. The inscription is complete, being the earliest in this Cathedral.

47. Thomas de Charlton, ob: A.D. 1343. Buried under an effigy and canopy beneath the great window of the N. Transept. The inscription has recently been painted on the lower part. "Dn~s Thomas de Charlton, Ep~us Hereford~s obiit A.D. 1343." (Note 12.)

48. John Trilleck, ob: A.D. 1360. This bishop was buried in the centre of the Choir under the modern circular design. From this place the brass effigy was moved when the new marble pavement was laid down by Bishop Bisse. His remains were disturbed in 1813 when Canon Ford was buried in that place. (Note 13.)

This fine early brass bears a figure of the Bishop 5 feet in height, drawn with remarkable boldness. The Vestments are those proper to the Episcopal office, but the Tunic is wanting. The pastoral Staff terminates in an elegant foliaged scroll. The Canopy is mutilated, and the inscription is entirely lost. Dingley's sketch preserves the words "gratus prudens pius. . . Andree festo preventus morte recessit . . propè favens."

49. Lewis de Charleton, ob: A.D. 1369. Buried in S.E. Transept under what was formerly a rich monument. The effigy, and portion only of the original Tomb have been replaced. The original inscription, visible until taken down circa 1842, has been lately replaced. "Lud~s de Charleton, Epu~s Hereford~s, obiit A.D. 1369. (Note 14.)

Note 10.—In Carter's Architecture, A.D. 1795, there are two sketches of shields and spandrel on this tomb. Plates 45, 78. Mr. Bloxam, in his remarks on Sep. Effigies, says:—Perhaps the most interesting feature in the Cathedral is the stone-work erection pertaining to the Shrine of St. T. de C. The design is a rich specimen of Decorated work, and consists of a high tomb arcaded along each side in 6 divisions, by cinquefoiled pointed arches, each containing the statuette of a knight in a hooded hawberk of mail with a sleeveless surcoat, shield, and sword. The spandrels of the arches are covered with sculptured foliage. Above this is an open arcade of 6 pointed arches trefoiled within, and the spandrels enriched with sculptured foliage. The slab which covers the upper portion of this work is flat. On it probably was placed the wooden feretrum or shrine which contained the actual remains of the canonized Bishop. This tomb was opened some 40 years ago. I have an account written by one who was present, which it would not be prudent to publish. It has been carefully restored and moved from the eastern wall, and mounted on a new stone base, under the direction of the late Sir G. G. Scott.

11.—For further details of this tomb see the description of Plate II.

12.—Arch: Journal, XXXIV. 422.

13.—Full particulars of the opening of this grave were given by Canon Russell in a small pamphlet, published in 1830. This brass has been engraved in Gough's Sep: Mon. Haines Mon: Brasses. Dingley, CXXIII. Fasti Herefordenses. Plate XX.

14.—Ding: CXXV. One panel remains bearing the Arms of this Bishop. Or, a lion rampant, gules.

52. John Trevenant, ob: A.D. 1404. Buried in the S. Transept beneath a canopy and effigy. There is no record of an inscription. Three panels forming the front part of this tomb have been placed in error beneath the effigy of Dean Harvey in S.E.T. (Note 15.)

59. John Stanberry, ob: A.D. 1474. Buried under an effigy and monument of alabaster on the N. side of the High Altar. No record remains of the inscription originally in metal on the N. side of this Tomb. A metal plate remains on the adjacent wall in the N. aisle of Choir, with the following lines—

"Marmoris hac ffossa. tetra. petra contegit ossa
Stanbury pontificis. carmeliteque Joh~is.
Doctoralis erat. sibi regnans fama p' orbem
Criminis O xte petimus quo tergere sordem
Qui Bangorensem. Lustro. rexit bene sedem
X bino post I. simul hanc decoravit et edem
Hu~c co~misso grege lupu~ sibi quando fugavit
Mors cu~ dente cruento trux tunc bellua strauit

Anno Milleno. C quater L. x quoque bino
Quatuor hiis junctis. in templi tempor' festo
Qui legis hec ora. pro presule mente benigna
Vt sint absque mora. celi sibi gaudia digna."
(Note 16.)

63. Richard Mayo, ob: A.D. 1516. Buried under an effigy and rich tomb on S. side of High Altar. The ancient brass work disappeared in former times from the carved panel on the adjacent wall. The Tomb and inscription have been restored at the cost of Magdalen College, Oxford, of which College this Bishop was the first President. "Dn~s Richardus Mayo, Ep~us Herefordensis, obiit XVIII.o' die Aprilis MDXVI. Restored 1857." (Note 17.)

Note 15.—Dingley, CXXVIII. Arch: J., XXXIV. 413. Arms, Or, within a bordure engrailed Az. 3 Lion's heads erased, Gules.

16.—This very beautiful effigy is worthy of a detailed description. The Bishop is represented wearing the mitra pretiosa, with the face close shaven. Beneath the alb are the skirts of the cassock. Over the alb appear the extremities of the stole, and above this the dalmatic. The chasuble over the dalmatic is richly worked with orfreys in the front and at the sides. About the neck is the amice; gloves are on the hands. The pastoral staff veiled, is on the left side, but the crook is gone. Figures of angels—now much mutilated—were on either side of the head. At the feet is a lion. On the north side are 10 panels filled with mutilated statuettes, also 1 on the W. and 1 on the E corner, representing—

1. A Bishop.
2. Angel holding shield—modern Arms of See.
3. St. Ethelbert, as supposed. Model of Church in left hand, Sword in right hand.
4. Angel, with Ancient Arms of See.
5. Virgin and Holy Child.
6. Angel, Arms of Deanery.
7. Bishop.
8. Angel, with Stanbury Arms.
9. King, with Orb and Sceptre.
10. Angel. Arms, 1 and 4th, 3 fleur-de-lis. 2 and 3, Three lions rampant.
11. Bishop with Staff (west end).
12. St. John Baptist.

Rawl: 40. Dingley, CXXXVI., gives a sketch of this Tomb surrounded by iron railing, but he gives no inscription.

17.—This Bishop is represented wearing the mitra pretiosa with the infulæ depending behind, and his face close shaven. He is vested in the amice with richly worked apparels, in the alb, tunic, dalmatic, and chasuble. The stole is not visible: the maniple on the left arm is richly ornamented and fringed. The sandals are round toed. The pastoral staff, veiled, is on the left side, the crook being richly worked. The gloves are covered with rings and jewels at the back, the wrists having pendant tassels. At the feet are two dogs. The southern side of the tomb is panelled in 8 divisions, with statuettes more or less mutilated, in each recess representing—1, a Bishop; 2, St. Paul; 3, St. John Baptist; 4, B.V.M. and Child; 5, Our Lord, with orb in his hand; 6, St. Matthew: 7, St. Peter; 8, St. Ethelbert (as supposed). His Arms were Arg. on a fess Sa., between 3 roses Gu. a lily of the first.

Arch: J., XXXIV. 415. This tomb is in a very perfect state, with the exception of certain finials which are lost. It was opened by Dean Merewether, who described the contents in the Arch: J. III. 263.

64. Charles Booth, ob: A.D. 1535. Buried under an effigy and Tomb in the N. wall of the Nave, erected by the Bishop during lifetime. The original inscription, cut into stone fixed above the effigy remains uninjured.

"Carolus Booth, Episcopus Herefordensis cum 18 annos, 5 menses et totidem dies Ecclesiæ huic cum laude prefuisset, quinto die Maii 1535 defunctus sub hoc tumulo sepultus jacet." (Note 18.)

68. Robert Warton, alias Purefoy, ob: A.D. 1557.

Bp. Godwin states that this Bishop "jacet in Australi parte Ecclesi˜ Cathedralis."

B. Willis in his M.S. states that "he was buried in H. Cathedral without any memorial." (Note 19.)

70. Herbert Westfaling, ob: A.D 1601. Buried under an effigy against the N. wall of the N. Transept. The original monument is altogether destroyed, but a portion of the original inscription is placed in the S. Cloister, of which the following is a copy made up from Rawlinson 127—

"Memoriæ Herberti Westfalingi quondam Episcopi Herefordensis sacrum. Herbertus Westfaling natus Londini, educatus Oxonii, in Æde Christi, Academiæ Vice-cancellarius dignissimus erat.

"Bonorum, Pauperum, Doctorum &ct., amantissimus semper vixit. Oxonii igitur Collegium Jesu annuis redditibus; Episcopali munificentia non indignis, in perpetuum auxit. Hunc virum moribus graciosissimum, prudentia clarissimum, pietate admirabilem, hæc Ecclesia ad annos sexdecim et amplius Episcopum habuit; cujus corpus quamvis Mortalitas terræ subjecit, animum tamen ejus pietas cælo inservit. Obiit 1° die Martii. A.D. 1601."

The following was painted on the stone base A.D. 1877—"Dom˜s Herbertus Westfaling Epis˜c Hereford˜, obiit A.D. 1601. (Note 20.)

71. Robert Benett, ob: A.D. 1617. Buried beneath an effigy on the N. side of the Choir. The whole of the original monument of alabaster and marble is destroyed. On the adjoining wall in N. aisle of Choir, the following fragments may be seen—

1. A circular tablet with Mitre and Arms of See, impaling those of Benett, quartering the Arms of Langley.

2. Painted tablets of wood, with Latin verses, which are here given.

Hoc sita sunt tumulo cælesti digna Sepulchro
Ingenium, pietas, et sine fraude fides;
Religionis Honos, Dux templi, et gratia Doctis
Porta patens miseris, Urbis et orbis amor.
O veri Antistes veræ pietatis amator
Non sine fruge fides, nec sine fine preces,
Præsul in Urbe tribus Tu lustris: cum tua sese
In Christi Sacrum conderet umbra sinum.

LEONARDUS BENETT.

Note 18.—Most of our large ancient monuments were protected by iron railings. The ironwork in front of this Tomb is the only specimen in the Cathedal which has not been disturbed.
The front is divided into six square panels, each containing a shield with armorial bearings. The recumbent effigy represents the Bishop as vested with the mitra pretiosa with pendant fillets. He wears the cassock, amice, alb, stole, fringed tunic and dalmatic, and chasuble with orfreys in front. Broad toed sandals appear on the feet; the hands are gloved; the pastoral staff is veiled on the right side. The crook and ferrule are gone. The head reposes on a double cushion, and on the right side is a feathered angel. At his feet there is no animal. By his will be appointed to be buried in the vestments in which he was consecrated. Arms, Arg. 3 boars heads erased erect, Sa. A rose in fess point.

19.—The mutilated Tomb in the N.E. Transept may possibly have something to do with this Bishop.

20.—Dingley, CXXXVII., gives a good sketch of this Tomb. This being the earliest example of a Post Reformation effigy a great change is found in all the details of dress and position. This Bishop is represented reclining on the right side, with the head supported by the right hand. On his head is a scull cap, a moustache and a long flowing beard, and round the neck a ruff. He is vested in the rochet and chimere, over which is worn the tippet; the drapery of the rochet or cassock is gathered up and held by the left hand. The folds of these are very numerous and unsatisfactory, and the execution of the stone effigy is indifferent. The Arms were Arg. a cross between 4 caltrops, Or.

Quam pia vita fuit, quam Sancta et sacra Benette

Et quæcunque doces homines mandata colebas,

This effigy is of alabaster, the hands are gone, and the head reposes on a cushion. This Bishop wears a close-fitting skull cap, moustache, and beard. Round the neck is a ruff. He is vested in the rochet, chimere, and tippet. The feet rest on a lion. Arms Quarterly 1 and 4 Arg., a cross between 4 demi Lions rampant Gu., 2 and 3 paly of six, Arg. and Vert.

73. Augustine Lindsell, ob: A.D. 1634. Buried in S.E. Transept under an effigy. The whole of the original monument and inscription have been destroyed. Rawlinson 32 gives the inscription, also Dingley CXXXIV., but no sketch of the monument.

"D. O. M. S."

"Augustinus Lindsell. Primo Petriburgensis mox Herefordensis Ecclesiæ Gubernaculis admotus, tandem ex motu Requiem invenit. Calculo extinctus est die sexto Novembris MDCXXXIV. Vir omni literatura excultissimus, pietate egregia et candore animi singulari, et per omnia sæculo suo major. De quo si forte sileat ingrata posteritas, sat erit compendio dixisse Theologiæ Oraculum hic jacet."

In this recumbent effigy the Bishop is represented as wearing the square cap, moustache, and beard. He wears the rochet and chimere with the tippet over. The rochet is plaited in front with a worked border, and the lawn sleeves are very full, the lappets of the breast of the chimere being thrown back.

75. Theophilus Field, ob: A.D. 1636. Buried in the N.E. Transept in a vault beneath an alabaster half effigy. The monument is entirely destroyed.

78. Herbert Croft, ob: A.D. 1691. Buried in the Choir beneath the present Episcopal Throne. There was no monument, but the marble slab formerly over this Bishop's grave is now placed in the S.E. Transept, beside that of Dean Benson. On these two stones are two hands joined, with the words—"In vitâ conjuncti, Morte non divisi."

"Depositum Herberti Croft. de Croft, Episcopi Herefordensis. Obiit 18 die Maii Aº Dnⁱ 1691. Ætatis suæ 88."

The arms of this Bishop are well cut in the upper part of this black marble. Quarterly, per fess indented Az. and Arg. in 1st quarter a Lion passant guardant, Or.

79. Gilbert Ironside, ob: A.D. 1701. Buried in the Church of St. Mary Somerset, London, under an inscribed marble slab. Removed to this Cathedral in 1867, to a vault in the S.E. Transept.

The above inscription is in the pavement of the S.E.T. The following inscription on a brass plate is fixed on the wall immediately adjacent—

"M.S. Reverendissimi in Christo Patris Gilbertus Ironside. Qui obiit 27 die Augusti A.S. 1701. et in æde B. Mariæ de Somerset in urbe Londinensi fuit sepultus. On a small brass plate, formerly in the pavement, is the following—

The Rt. Revd. Father in God Philip Lord Bishop of Hereford. Died Sept. 6th, anno Dom! 1721. Aged 55 years.

84. Lord James Beauclerk, ob: A.D. 1787. Buried in the Choir beneath a small inscribed marble slab, which is now fixed on the E. wall of the Bishops' Cloister, bearing the following inscription—

The Right Honourable and Reverend Lord James Beauclerk, departed this life the 19: of Oct. (1787) Aged 77.

The following tablet used to be on the E. wall of the S. Transept. It was erected by Canon Cope about the year 1821.

Gratitude devotes this Memorial to the Right Hon. and Right Rev. Lord James Beauclerk, D.D., who was Bishop of Hereford nearly Forty-two years, and died on the 19th day of October, 1787, in the 78th year of his age. He was the eighth son of Charles, Duke of Saint Albans, by Lady Diana Vere, daughter of Aubury de Vere, Earl of Oxford, and reflected honour on his descent, by personal Virtue. His life evinced the utmost Purity of intention and sincerity of heart. He animated the exertions of his Clergy, by disposing of his preferments so as to reward them and promote the Comfort and Conciliate the esteem of Persons in every Station, by a Princely residence in his Palace during his Episcopacy.

86. John Butler, ob: A.D. 1802. Buried in the Choir near the Screen on the N. side, beneath a small square of white marble, now in the Bishops' Cloister.

John Butler, LL.D., died the 10th day of Dec. 1802, Aged 85.

The following inscription was formerly in the Choir on the N.E. side of Tower pier. Portions of it being broken off are lost. It is now fixed on the E. wall of the Bishops' Cloister. (Note 24.)

24.—A portrait of this Bishop, lately presented, is preserved at the Palace.

90. "Hon: Edward Grey, ob: A.D. 1837."

On a square white marble formerly in the pavement of the Choir, now in the Bishops' Cloister.

The following is on the monument, now in the Cloister, formerly erected under the Organ loft on the west side.

"Sacred to the Memory of
THE HON. AND
RIGHT REV. EDWARD GREY, D.D.
Youngest Son of Charles, first Earl Grey,
Who was born 25th March, 1782, and died 24th July, 1837.

In the year 1831, he has appointed to the office of Dean of this Cathedral, from which, in the following year, he was elevated to the See of Hereford.

As a Prelate of the Church of England, to the principles of which he was devoutly attached, firm, conscientious, and uncompromising.

As a Preacher, eloquent, faithful, and impressive; yet his most distinguishing characteristic, for which he was remarkable in his earliest youth, was fervent and unaffected piety.

His mortal remains are deposited within the Choir of this Cathedral; his spirit, as we humbly trust, is with God, his Saviour."

On a brass plate in the Choir on base of pillar.

"The Hon. and Right Rev. Edward Grey, D.D., XCth Bishop of Hereford, was here buried July 31, 1837.

Also his son Arthur John Grey, Lieut. R.N., May 2nd, 1854."

This was the last actual interment inside the Cathedral.

See Ground Plan, No. 136.

Memorials of the following Bishops who are not buried in the Cathedral.

61, Edmund Audley, presided over this See A.D. 1492—1502, when he erected a Chantry consisting of two vaulted chambers on the S. side of the Lady Chapel. He was promoted to Salisbury where he built another Chantry, and was there buried. The whole being coloured internally must have presented a magnificent appearance. The stone screen on the N. side of this Chantry is divided into 20 panels, containing painted effigies of saints and personages who have not been identified. The coloured figures are arranged in two rows. In the lower row 4 spaces are taken by the Vestry window and 4 by the doorway. Nine figures have perished; about 23 remain. The panels in the base contain shields.

1. Initials entwined, I.R.
2. Arg. or fess on bar, arg. Fleur-de-lis Arg. 3 roses gules
3. Gules—interlacing work—colour gone
4. Arms of Deanery. 5. Modern See.
6. Antient See
7. Shield. Blue ground with green dragon fly.

There are similar shields carved on bosses of groining, and fragments of antient glass in the upper windows. There is a shield bearing 2 wings joined to a heart, as may also be seen in the groining of S. Transept.* Also another shield having 3 oval spots from which the original glass is gone.

Note * See Plate XVII.

76. George Coke, ob: A.D. 1646. Buried in the S.E. corner of the Chancel at Eardisley. An imposing Monument was erected about 20 years after the decease of this Bishop in the N.E. corner of the S.E. Transept. This was taken down circa 1843; various portions becoming lost or injured during the repairs, the effigy only was replaced A.D. 1861. A portion of the original inscription remains on the adjacent wall, and another portion, nearly illegible, is now in the Bp. Cloister, 8th bay.† (See R. 35 for copy of the same.) The upper portion of the Tomb was erected by his descendants A.D. 1875, with the following inscription :—

"In Memory of George Coke, fifth Son of Richard Coke, of Trusley, Derbyshire, and brother of Sir John Coke, Secretary of State to Charles I.: born 3rd October, 1570. Bishop of Bristol, 1631; translated to Hereford, 18th June, 1636; died 10th December, 1646."

"A meek, grave, and learned man, much beloved by those who were subjected to his jurisdiction, in defence of the Church privileges in the stormy period in which he was Bishop of this Diocese, he suffered fine and imprisonment at the hands of the Parliament."

"This monument was restored by some of his descendants A.D. 1875."

The following extract and translation of the original inscription, written by Francis Hodgson, late Provost of Eaton, is taken by permission from a Family History compiled by Major J. Talbot Coke, printed for private circulation A.D. 1880 :—

Over the Bishop's effigy was a Latin inscription, on two tablets, in the verbose and inflated style of the period, and which, as aptly observed by a late dignitary of the church, is "indeed composed in the most unchastised spirit of the Restoration"; yet, after due allowance has been made for the times in which it was written, there can be little doubt that he was a man of distinguished learning and ability, of great firmness and discretion, and singular piety.

Hear, Traveller, or behold him, who is no longer heard. Learn his singular sense of Discipline. The Prototype has impressed upon the statue the Image of his Person. See him teaching a more wonderful God, healing by the Shadow of Peter, dividing the waters by the wonder-working mantle of Elijah, (but) not a truer God than in this truth-telling Image. If you do not believe the teacher, believe him who experienced that "Godliness hath the promise of this life, as well as of that which is to come."

He experienced it who taught it. This Prelate full of (76) years, happy in a pious and fruitful wife, happy in his marriage chain, every day more pleasing, and in the torch brighter every day, above the torch of hymen. In his three Sacerdotal Sons, and four Sons who were Laymen, but theologically pious—fuller of God than of hope inasmuch as filled with the assurance of faith, and inspired by the Deity, he so lived as possessing life in patience, and death in desire: wishing to die the death which he hardly felt; and as soon as he was dead feeling himself immortal.

Oh day to be extolled above all length of years the tenth day of December, after the tenth year of his Episcopal Translation. In the year of his Saviour 1646 the most auspicious day of his Translation into Eternity, on that birthday of his Glory died the Angel of the Church of Hereford, endowed on the same with an equality to the Angels.

The second tablet contains—

Emulous Posterity will be interested as we hope, in knowing that, which, if men were silent, the stones would proclaim, that the excellent and venerable old man, George Coke, Lord Bishop of Bristol first, then of Hereford, ennobled his birth with every instance of Virture worthy of his Ancestors, through their series prolonged from afar, and the knightly splendour of his Father, and the Family Lineage. And that he was the greatest ornament of those who had been anciently well-born.

That he examined Divine subjects and the highest mysteries with a diligent and severe scrutiny, nor unravelled them only, but also taught them with a lucid perspicacity, that he administered the Sacred Rites suitably to the worship of the Deity, and to the Piety of the Worshippers, trembling with most reverential awe. That he gave answers from the sacred Oracles to those who consulted him concerning religion. That he set forth the fundamental principles of the English Reformation as doctrines to be imbibed in the inmost hearts of the Clergy and people. That he lived in the most incorrupt, long, and unwearied practice and exemplification of every kind of purity. That he rendered and left himself by his severe gravity an object of respect to his Fellows in the mysteries (for by that title he loved to distinguish the clergy), and most acceptable to them by his bland conciliating courtesy and meekness.

Note † B. Willis states that this was written by Canon Sherborne (ob: 1679). Dingley, CXLI., gives a good sketch of the Tomb. Arch. J., XXXIV., 417. Arms, Gules, 3 crescents and a canton, Or.

(His health) at length becoming infirm, and failing among our late commotions, intestine tumults, and calamities of the Church, among the confessors of the Priestly Order, imprisoned together with him, not without the prerogative of persecution and conformity with Christ, that he proved himself the most courageous fellow-sufferer. That as the consolation of all his sorrows, of his life, and of his death, he constantly pronounced one but most comprehensive word (which was appended like a label to his most trustful lips) "I shall rise again."

89. "George Isaac Huntingford, D.D., Bishop of Hereford, died April 29th, 1832, aged 83 years."

A Memorial Window was erected in the S.E.T. at the sole cost of Lord Saye and Sele in 1863. The above inscription is painted on the glass.

There is a monument in the Bp's Cloister, formerly under the W. side of the organ loft, with the following inscription.

To the Memory of
GEORGE ISAAC HUNTINGFORD, D.D., F.R.S.,
Lord Bishop of this Diocese and Warden of Winchester College.

He died in his 84th year, April 29th, 1832.

Deeply versed in Biblical and Classical Literature, he was held in high estimation as a profound theologian and accomplished scholar. Humility of mind and simplicity of manners, integrity of heart, benignity of disposition, and the most expansive charity, shone conspicuously in the character of this excellent and amiable Prelate.

His mortal remains, at his own particular desire, are deposited in the churchyard at Compton, near Winchester, where he was first appointed a minister of that Gospel, which it was the leading object of his life to explain and illustrate, faithfully endeavouring, both by precept and example, to adorn the doctrine of God his Saviour in all things.

Arms carved on Monument, and painted on Memorial Window: Per fess Sa. and erminois a fess per fess nebulee counter-changed, in chief 3 crosses patèe fitchee, Arg. the base fretty, Gules.

91. Thomas Musgrave, 1837 to 1847. On a brass plate, erected Dec., 1862, beneath a large 4 light window, by Warrington, in N. aisle of Choir, is the following inscription:—

"The window above, and those in the chapel beneath were filled with stained glass A.D. 1862, in token of respect and love to the Memory of Thomas Musgrave, D.D. Bishop of Hereford, afterwards Archbishop of York, who died 4th May, 1860."

Subjects in stained glass illustrate the life of St. Paul.

92. Renn Dickson Hampden. Died in London on April 23, 1868, and was buried in Kensal Green Cemetery, near his predecessor Archbishop Musgrave, under a plain Tomb, with a brief inscription.

It is with sincere regret that I have to record the fact that there is no Memorial in the Cathedral to this learned and memorable Prelate.

Deans of the Cathedral Church of Hereford.

John de Aquablanca. "He died 1320, and was buried in the Cathedral, under a sumptuous monument, near Bishop Aquablanca." B.W. 533.

The effigy on the floor of the aisle covers the original grave of this Dean, which is immediately below the pavement. He was not deposited in a solid stone coffin, but within stone slabs. The remains had been disturbed and filled with rubbish. No inscription has been recorded. G P. No. 10.

Stephen de Ledbury. In the South wall of the Nave, near the Bishop's Cloister door, is the effigy of a Dean under a cusped arch. This is considered to be the work of the middle of XIV. Century. There is no inscription. It is suggested that this would represent Stephen de Ledbury, who was Dean from 1320 to 1352.*

Note * V. H. Guide, No. 82. B. W., 533. Arch: Journ:, XXXIV., 411.

John de Middleton. Deprived A.D. 1380.

Brown Willis, in his M.S., says that "he was buried no doubt under one of the great gravestones in the Nave, about 5 yards below the choir door."†

John Harold, ob: Oct. 19, 1393.

B. Willis, in his M.S., states, "On the north side of the letter L. lies another long stone marked 31, for Dean Harold."

Also B. W., 533, states that "he was buried in the Cathedral, where is yet an imperfect inscription on a gravestone to his memory. What remains is these words, "de salme mercy, 1393."

The spot thus indicated is in front of Dean Berew's tomb, where a fragment of an interesting brass was laid down in 1860 which was then supposed to represent Dean Harold. See Fragments of Inscriptions, No. XXIV.

Henry Shelford, ob: Sep. 26, circa 1445.

B. Willis, in his M.S., states, "about a foot or two northward of No. 23, and near the letter L, which is just about the middle of it, and about a foot from it, lies a long stone marked 30, for Dean Shelford."

This would be in the vestibule of the Lady Chapel to the N. of Dean Berew's tomb. No trace of this stone remains.

John Berew, or Beaurieu, ob: April 6, 1462, "and was buried under an arch in the Lady Chapel on the south side." B. W. 534.

Dingley, CLXXIX., gives a sketch of the monument attributed to this Dean, with his rebus of a boar wearing a coat of the Arms of the Deanery, among leaves of rue. R. 225.

The effigy is a very beautiful work, but it is now considered to be that of a Dean, or other ecclesiastic attired in a cassock with close sleeves, surplice, and tippet, who lived about the middle or early half of the XIV. Century. (M. H. Bloxham, A. J., XXXIV. 419.) There is no record of an inscription. The engraving of this tomb by Carter gives a good view of the painting formerly under the arch, and Hollis in his "Monumental Effigies," Part VI, Plate 5 gives a highly finished engraving of this ecclesiastic.

Thomas Chawndeler, ob: 1490.

Against the W. wall of the S.E. Transept is a much mutilated figure in the attire of a Canon with the orphrey of the cope ornamented with pomegranates, the head and lower part broken off. It probably commemorates Dean Chawndeler, 1490, as it corresponds with the description given by Duncumb I., 559, of his effigy which lay on the floor of this transept by the door opening into the Vicar's Cloister.

The inscription still remains (now mural)

"Orate pro aia~ p'nobilis viri Magistri Thome Chawndeler sacre Theologie p'fes [soris nuper Cancellarij] Uniu'sitatis Oxoñ ac hujus ecclie~ Decani qui obiit in crastino om~i sc~or circit' [hora~ quarta~] versus Mane Anno Domini Millimo CCCC° LXXXX° Cuius Anime p~picietur [De' fiat fiat.]"‡

John Harvey, ob: 1501.

Ding. CLXIX. mentions this tomb without any inscription as "An alabaster monument of one in Episcopall habit, quære what Bishop it was."

There is no record of any inscription having been attached to this tomb. The alabaster effigy was replaced in its original position, in the S.E. Transept, on a new base in 1860. The three shields beneath it belong to Bp. Trevenant's Tomb and were placed under this effigy in error. R. does not allude to this Tomb.

B. W. 534 states, "he appointed to be buried in the Cathedral before St. Margaret's altar. . . . I presume the effigies lying on a tomb in the upper end of the S. Isle, near the Vicar's Cloysters, may be his."

† Several of the large stones turned out of the Cathedral are now placed at the entrance to the ancient Chapter House. The metal pins remaining in these stones indicate the former existence of very fine brass work.

‡ Dingley, CLXVIII. B. W., 534.

The brass of Dean Froucester who died A.D. 1529 is in the S. Aisle of the Choir, measures 8ft. 6in. × 4ft. 4in., and is much worn in places. This Dean is pourtrayed in cap, almuce, surplice, and rich cope ornamented with pomegranates; the orphrey is adorned with jewels. The canopy in debased style is supported by niches containing saints with their names beneath. The two upper ones appear to be representations of the Holy Trinity. St. Ethelbert, holding a church, St. John Evangelist, St. Katherine, St. Thomas, a Bishop, St. Peter, St. Mary (?)

Above is a large plate engraved with a triple canopy, having in the centre the sacred monogram I.H.C., and on either side a monogram of Froucester. Between the finials are the arms of the Deanery, the See, ancient and modern, and those apparently of Froucester (argent on a fess [?] between 3 columbines sable, a lily). The whole composition is surrounded by an inscription in raised letters, and with symbols of the Evangelists at the corners.

"Orate pro ai~a ven'abilis viri Magri~ Edmu~di ffrowsetoure in sacra theologia p'fessoris ac nuper decani ecclie~ cath-Herforden ac p'bendarii de bartoncollwalle in eadm~ ecclīa cathī qui quidem Edmūdus via vniuse carnis est ingressus XVI. (die mensis Maii?) Anno domini Millesimo Quingentesimo vicesimo nono et Anno regni regis Henrici Octaui vicesimo primo. Cuius Anime et Animabus omniu~cristi fidelium propicietur Misericors deus. Amen."

At the foot are twelve laudatory verses.

Hūc quē facta satis quem fama remisit ad astra

Gamaliel Clifton, ob: April 29, 1541, was buried in this Cathedral.

B. W., 535, states in his M.S. that, "he lies as I take it on the left hand of Dean Frowcester."‖

Charles Langford. "Was buried in this Cathedral Oct. 28, 1607, without any memorial." B. W., 536.

George Benson, D.D., ob: 1692. "Depositum Georgii Benson, Decani Herefordensis, obiit 24^to^ die Augusti A° D^ni^ 1692. Ætatis suæ 78."

Buried beside Bishop Croft, underneath the Throne in the Choir.

The stone, now in pavement of S.E. Transept, was turned out into the C.H.Y., circa 1852, but was brought inside the Cathedral, and repaired at cost of Lord Saye and Sele, December, 1867.¶

John Tyler, D.D., ob: 1724.

"Infra conduntur reliquiæ Reverendi admodum in Christo patris Johannis Tyler, S.T.P. hujus ecclesiæ Decani, permissione divinâ Episcopi Landavensis; Qui dignitatem apostolicam vitâ vere apostolicâ ornabat, pietate, eruditione, probitate, charitate institutam, suavitate morum temperando amabilem reddebat, comis omnibus, sibi soli austerus. John Merewether, ob: A.D. 1850.

On a brass plate inserted in a large black marble slab over vault in Lady Chapel.

In this vault is interred the body of JOHN MEREWETHER, D.D.,
Sometime Deputy Clerk of the Closet to King William IV., Queen Adelaide, and Queen Victoria,
And for 18 years Dean of Hereford.
To the Restoration of this Cathedral he devoted the unwearied energies of his life, till its close on the 4th of April, 1850, in the 53rd year of his age.
"Whatsoever ye do, do all to the Glory of God."—1 Cor. x. 31.
Also, Adelaide, his eldest daughter, who died 17th July, 1841, in the 17th year of her age.

The 5 eastern windows of the Lady Chapel were fitted with stained glass, as a Public Memorial, in 1852. There are 21 medallions illustrating the Life of our Lord, designed by N. J. Cottingham, and executed by Charles A. Gibbs.

The following inscription is on the glass :—

"In memoriam Johannis Merewether, sacre theologie professoris, ecclesiæ Herefordensis decani, quo strenue fautore hujus sacræ ædis restitutio feliciter est inchoata. Obiit pridie nonas Aprilis anno Domini MDCCCL."

Richard Dawes, M.A., ob: 1867.

Buried in the area of the B. Cloister without any monument. A rich and beautiful Altar Tomb has been erected in the N.E.T., designed by Sir G. G. Scott, R.A. Artists Messrs. Farmer and Brindley. The base consists of polished marbles and alabaster divided into richly carved panels. A life sized effigy of purest Sicilian white marble occupies the upper portion of this cenotaph : the work of Mr. M. Noble, R.A. The Dean is represented in academical costume, with his head resting on volumes relating to Educational matters. The following inscription, in gilt letters, runs round the margin :—

"In memoriam Richardi Dawes, A.M., Ecclesiæ Herefordensis Decani, præ reverentiâ et desiderio hanc effigiem ponendam curaverunt amici et familiares; natus IV. Non. Mai, A.D. 1793; obiit prid. Non. Mart. A.D. 1867."

Clergy and Laity buried in the Cathedral or its Precincts, arranged in Alphabetical order.

William Adams, Vicar Choral.

There used to be a tablet to the above in the V. Cloister, next to that of Custos Allen. R., 61, gives the inscription.

"Quæris quis cubat hic? cubat hic Gulielmus Adamus,
Olim dulcisoni clarus in arte Chori,
Quem Pietas Sanctum monstravit, Pulpita Doctum;
Dixerunt Cives, hic jacit Urbis amor.

To perpetuate the memory of Joseph Bailey, Junior, Esquire,
Representative of this County in the House of Commons,
For more than IX. years.

A bust has been placed in the Shire Hall, and this Altar Screen erected in the Cathedral which his piety assisted to restore, not only by those united to him by the ties of kindred or private friendship, but by a general and voluntary subscription of the many who knew and appreciated his worth. For the great benevolence of his disposition and humility of his mind he was universally beloved. For the sound judgment, the strict integrity, and the active energy manifested in the duties of his station he was valued and admired. Firmly relying on the merits of his Redeemer, his fortitude unshaken by the pressure of a lingering and complicated disease, he was removed out of this world the 31st day of August, MDCCCL., in the XXXIXth year of his age.

Wife, children, father, brothers, friends, his County deplore their loss.

The deceased was of a very ancient North Wales family; was the eldest son of the late Rev. George Baxter, one of the Brethren of St. Catherine's Hospital, London; and grandson of James Baxter, Esq., of the Rock and Brynn, Montgomeryshire.

O kind he was, and just he was,
As father and as friend;
In life to all an honest man,
And very calm his end.
In manners mild and merciful,
And Christian and pure:
May others lead the life he led
And be of bliss as sure!
And may they die as died he
When shall this life's breath cease,
For his death was the good man's death;
His latter end was peace.

To the memory of Velters Cornewall, Esq., of Moccas, who represented this County during forty-six years in seven successive Parliaments. Encomiums upon the dead are often the dictates of flattery to the living. But the faithful friend who inscribes this marble (though he cannot but blame that excess of patriot jealousy, which too cautiously withheld the deceas'd from engaging in employments of State) yet does justice to those generous and unshaken principles, which alone directed his conduct, opposing whatever seem'd to interfere with the true interests of his country. By his last wife Catherine, youngest daughter of William Hanbury, Esq., of Little Marcle, he had two children, Frederick Henry, who died an infant, and Catherine, who (with her surviving mother) has caused this monument to be erected. He died at Moccas, upon the third of April, 1768, in the 73rd year of his age, just when his constituents were preparing to re-elect him to an eighth Parliament.

The brass of

RICHARD DE LA BARR,

ob: 1386, was formerly in the centre of the Choir, west of steps to the High Altar. It has been placed in the Lady Chapel near the tomb of Dean Borue, under the impression that it commemorated Dean Harold, who was there interred. It consists of a small figure in a Canon's dress; the cope ornamented with an orphrey of fleur de lys in lozenges, probably with reference to the arms of Cantilupe. The effigy is placed inside the head of a cross, of which one of the principal and 3 of the smaller finials were until recently remaining. Nearly 3 feet of the shaft are preserved, together with the 4 steps of the base, which are inscribed—

"mat' dei—miserere mei."

The marginal inscription is gone; but from a comparison of D., CXXIV., and R., 99, it probably ran thus—

"Hic jacet Magister Ricardus Delabarre quondam Canonicus hujus Ecclesiæ qui obiit XVI. die Mensis Octob' Anno Dñi. Mill~ CCCLXXXVI. cui' ai~e p~picietur Deus. Amen."

This brass is engraved in Boutell's Mon. Brasses.

On the floor of the S.E. Transept is the nearly perfect brass of

SIR RICHARD DELABERE, KNIGHT,

1514, and his two Wives, the first with 5 children and the second with 16.

The figures, which are small, are in the usual attire of the begining of Cen. XVI. The knight has a lance rest on his right breast, and his head reclines on a helmet with a large plume of feathers, and a demi-hound collared and couped as a crest. There is a small slip of brass below the groups of children, but it contained the names of 5 or 6 only out of the 21 children—Thomas, George, Anne, and Sibill. Three shields remain with the arms of Delabere. Az a bend ar. cotised or, between six martlets of the last, and other quarterings. A marginal inscription runs round the whole:—

"Off your charite pray for the soull of Sir Richard De[labere knyght, late of y^e^] Countie of Hereford. Anne, dought' of the lord Awdeley, and Elizabeth, dought' of Willam Mores, late s'geant of the hall to King Henry the VII. wives of the said Sir Richard, whiche decessid the XX. day of July, An^o^ dñi Mill~mo CCCCC^o^ XIIIJ on whois soules ihu~ have M'ci. Amen."

B. W., 502, describes the place as St. Michael's Chapel. D., CXXXIII., gives a large sketch of this brass.

John de la Halle.

An early inscription, described as Saxon and Norman by local writers, (but probably belonging to latter half of XIII. Century), was formerly in the modern wall of the Music Room, which was taken down in 1830, but no trace can be found of it after that time.

It was on a soft sandstone much decayed.

In Wright's History, 1819, the following copy of it is preserved:—

"Jon: de: la: halle: gyt: ici. dieu. de.
"Sa. alme. en. eyt. merci.
"ky. pur. sa. alme. priera.
"cent. iors. de. pardon. avera."

John de la halle lies here. God of his soul have mercy.
Who for his soul shall pray.
a hundred days of pardon shall have.

Richard Gough, who visited Hereford in 1789, gives a copy of this inscription in his Collection which he bequeathed to the Bodleian Library. The following is an exact copy, taken Feb., 1879:—

"Jon: de: la: Halle: git: ici: Dieu: de: sa: alme: en ait: merci: ky: pur: sa: alme: priera: cent: jours: de: pardon: aurai:"

Gough says it was "found under some old stones in the Cathedral yard, Hereford."

Note * This was the last burial within the Precincts. J. D. was for many years Sexton of the Cathedral and from him I derived much local information. The above inscriptions, lately on two stones, have been re-cut on one stone (Feb., 1881) at request of relatives.

On a red sandstone, much decayed, C.H.Y., 86.

Here lyeth the body of Richard Delamaine, Minister of the Gospel in Heref: who deceased 13 May, 1657.

Formerly in S.E.T. D., CLXIX.

Mr. Webb, in his "Civil War," II., 316, gives full information about this man. "R. D. assumes high precedence, domineers over the other ministers, displaces Primrose from St. Nicholas, interferes with the repair of the Cathedral of which he claims to be parochial pastor, alters the aisles and pews, pulls down Birch's seat, breaks the lock off Taylor's, and paints Taurus on the Governor's seat, Gemini on the Mayor and Aldermen's, Aries on that of the garrison officers, . . . and sends off a runaway glover's apprentice to London to be ordained for Little Hereford."

Richard and Isabella Delamare.

In the centre of the Lady Chapel, in original position, lies the fine brass of Richard Delamare, 1435, and Isabella, his wife, 1421.

It forms one of the best specimens of a military brass remaining, the figures being 5 feet and a half in height, and the entire composition 9 feet 7 inches. Portions of sides and canopy are lost. Besides the finials were 4 shields—

1. Arms, or, 3 bars dancetteé gu, a crescent for difference. Delamare.
2. Delamare impaling a fess within a bordure engrailed.
3. Lost.
4. Delamare, quartering the second coat.

The inscription at the feet is as follows :—

"Hic jacent Ric~us Delamare armiger qui obiit primo die Mensis Februarii. Anno domini Mill~mo cccc° xxxv° Et Isabella nuper uxor Ricardi Delamare que obiit xiiij° die Mensis Februarii Anno domini Millesimo cccc° xxj° Quorum animabus propicietur deus. Amen."

† Custos Felton was son of Dr. Felton, Principal of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford. He greatly promoted Chamber music, and was an excellent performer on the Harpsicord and Violin. He revived the College Musical Society, which held its meetings fortnightly in the old Hall. This place becoming inconvenient, the Coffee House (now the Savings Bank) was selected, which possessed the only room in the City sufficiently commodious for the purpose. This led to the building of the present College Hall, which was opened at the Meeting of the Three Choirs in 1753. W. F. wrote the "Burial Chant" for the funeral of his patron, Mr. Cornewall, M.P., when buried in this Cathedral in 1768. Rev. W. Cooke, in his MS., states that he died at the age of 57. The family of Custos Garbett have presented a portrait of Mr. Felton to the Custos and Vicars. July, 1881. I have lately found a Viola which can be traced to him.

E. I.

On an ancient stone now over the burial place of Dean Chaundler, are certain incised lines with the above letters, followed by the solitary figure 8. I am inclined to suppose that these lines were cut about A.D. 1640. A stone of similar character has lately been found under Chancel seats at Wormbridge. This may have been an altar slab with one end cut off? It is not known where it was found during recent restorations.

This youth in life was lovely, full of Grace,
And did in nought but Virtue grow apace :
His early parts began to shine most bright,
But soon, alas ! this Day was turn'd to Night.
What though he chanc'd by Violence to fall
Yet that was still his Great Creator's Call,
That from the Joys of Earth he should remove
To joys immortal with Himself above.

Parliament of 1802—1806, and for nearly twenty years Chairman of the Quarter Sessions. He was the only son of William Matthews Esq. of Burton in the Parish of Linton, by Jane his wife daughter and surviving heiress of Philip Hoskyns Esq. of Bernitham Court and Eliza his wife, daughter and sole heiress of Philip Scudamore Esq. of Kenchurch in this County. He was born 29th October 1755, died 15th Jan: 1826 in the seventy first year of his age. To diffuse happiness, uphold the laws and promote improvements of every kind, were the leading objects of his active and useful life. For the furtherance of these he possessed intellectual and moral qualifications not often united with ability, zeal and temper for the exemplary discharge of public duties. He joined the kindly virtues of cultivated talents which cheer and embelish social life. Respect and confidence awaited him abroad. At home the tenderest affection. In every vicissitude of joy and sorrow he maintained a meek composure of mind and a constant sense of divine providence worthy of his Christian faith. His remains with those of Eliza his beloved wife, and of William Hoskyns Matthews, their deeply lamented eldest son, are deposited in the cemetery of the Parish in which he resided.

This used to be over his grave in the Choir. His monument used to be in S. Transept by Bp. Tyler.

Sacred to the Memory of John Napleton, D.D., Canon Residentiary of this Cathedral and Chancellor of the Diocese, who died on the 9th of Dec., 1817, in the 80th year of his age. Worthy to be number'd with the good for his exemplary Virtues, and with the wise for the application of high talents to important purposes. Distinguished during his academical career, by his exertions for the advancement of Learning. Diligent in the discharge of his judicial duties, an active promoter of the temporal welfare of all who relied on his assistance. He labour'd more abundantly at the great work of the eternal Salvation of Mankind; not ceasing to prove his zeal for Religion when he grew old in its service; but through the decline of life and in the prime of his days. And even amidst the afflictive langour which preceded his dissolution, enlightening the world by fresh illustrations of the Gospel to the very last.

On a white marble tablet over the B. C. door on S. side of Nave. Buried in centre of Choir between Canon Ford and Bishop Beauclerk.

This so sacred honour'd Dust
From three Mitres hallowed, must
Sleep secure in silent Urne,
Till their glorious Spirits return.
Then shall primitivine Sanctity,
Regular zeal, great Charity,
All those good deeds she hath done,
Dart rays, that eclipse the Sun,
And this earth's translated load
Live rewarded with its God.

"Near the monument of Bp: Bennett is an elegant marble monument to the memory of Anne Rudd, who died August 23, 1781, aged 28, with the following simple and elegant inscription, written by the Rev. A. Rudd, A.M., to whose unfortunate memory, each one who knew him will certainly drop the sympathising tear of pity."

"To a form unaffectedly elegant, was join'd the more permanent possession of a soul elevated by religion and a mind enriched by a familiar acquaintance with useful science. Her exemplary manner of discharging the relative duties of social life, proclaim'd the soundness of her judgment & the purity of her principles. This humble tablet is not inscribed as a tribute to vanity or a sacrifice to custom; but solely to record the virtues of an amiable character, and to alleviate those pangs of separation, which they only can adequately conceive, whom similarity of suffering may have taught sympathy of sensation."

Price's History, 96. D., 570.

Archdeacon Richard Rudhale, 1476.

A portion of the inscription is fixed on the S. W. wall of E. Transept.

A design has been prepared for a mural tablet, by Sir G. G. Scott's son, to be placed in the N. Transept on the pier to W. of Bp: Acquablanca's tomb. On this spot Sir G. Scott addressed the members of the Royal Archæological Institute, August 7, 1877. The tablet will be erected by subscription.

The inscription has been prepared by that able scholar, Prebendary Phillott.

John Scudamore, Esq., late of Kentchurch, in this County, died greatly regretted July 1796, in the 69th year of his age.

A gentleman in whose life & conduct were happily exemplified, elegance of manners, liberality of sentiment, and elevation of mind. By the free suffrages of generous and discerning citizens, he was repeatedly chosen to represent the City of Hereford in Parliament, and discharged the important duties of that situation during a series of 34 years, to the satisfaction of his constituents, and with honour to himself; uniformly supporting those measures which he considered best calculated to maintain the rights of Englishmen, and to promote the general interests of mankind.

This humble stone is erected to preserve the memory of exalted worth, and to gratify the feelings of warm and respectful friendship."

We mourn not here in honours or in pride
The flower whose blossoms withered, drooped & died,
No pompous epitaph her worth can show,
No scutcheon mocks the dust that rests here below.
We bid the living pangs of memory prove,
Alike the sisters and the daughters love.
No more let unavailing tears be shed
For why disturb the slumbers of the dead :
The fount of love whose stream is yet unspent,
Shall calm our hearts that live her monument.

Sacred to the memory of Robert Bryan Crowther, Esq., Grandson of Bryan Crowther, formerly of Street Court in this County Esqr.; and only son of the late Revd. Robert Crowther, Vicar of Stratton in Northamptonshire, and Penelope his wife daughter of Thomas Symonds Powell of Pengethly in this County Esqr.; this highly valued and much regretted youth was translated into eternity on the morning of the 25 of January A.D. 1823 in the 22 year of his age.

"The days of man are but as grass," &c.

A bereaved and deeply sorrowing mother, as a tribute of her tender affection consecrates this marble to the fondly cherished memory of her beloved and greatly lamented son. Correct and amiable in outward life, mild and endearing in manners, affectionate and kind in disposition, nature mourns his early removal, but faith can look beyond the grave. And with praise adore the gracious influence of that divine power, which taught him to hail as blessings the very afflictions, that brought down his strength in the way and shortened his days, because they led him to see the vanity and nothingness of this transitory life and to fix his thoughts and hopes on those joys and that ineffable glory which through the mercy of redeeming love will endure for ever.

Fragments of Inscriptions.

I.

THERE is a large stone in the enclosure by S.E.T., with four square indented spaces on upper surface. An inscription was formerly on the sides, of which the following words only remain—"of Hereford who . . . . . ie anno domini."

2. On two small fragments of a light stone in the area of B. C. was the following—". . . ila the wife . . . . Hopkins of this city D . . . erer who departed this life the 6th day of December 1740 (or 1749)."

3. On a small stone in 2nd Bay of B. C. area, central part of inscription only remaining—"Here lyeth the body of Ja . . daughter of Joseph . . . erwood Esq. and . . lizabeth his wi . . . . tton in the Cou . . . . f Hereford, w . . departed this li . . March the 17th aged 7 years."

4. On a fragment in B. C. area near W. end of Nave—"Here lie . . . . Body of Griffith . . . . and Bri . . . decease . . xvx? 16 . . ."

5. Here lieth y^e body of John (Gwillim?) . . . Mary the wife of . . . Cook . . . . dep . . . . .

On a fragment of red sandstone in area of B. C.

6. On a broken fragment in B. C. area, 2nd Bay—". . . . late of . . . in the C . . . an . . who de . . . the 22nd day of . . . r 1814, aged 65."

7. On a fragment in the Lady Chapel (circa 1860)—"Also Ann his wife who died October 26, 1806 (or 1809) aged 84 years."

8. On a slab in B. C. Bay XII? now much defaced, were traces of an inscription to Mary Croft. A few words only are legible.

9. On a large grey stone in C.H.Y., No. 70—" . . . B . . . y 27, 17–7."

10. On a stone in C.H.Y. No. 34—"she was born . . . she died . . ."

11. On a soft red sandstone, much decayed, No. 71 in C.H.Y., which formerly bore three inscriptions, the following only remains—". . . . Catherine . . . died May . . . . . And of James their . . son, who died April . . ."

12. No. 43 in C.H.Y. had three inscriptions now illegible.

13. No. 63 in C.H.Y. Formerly a headstone with cherub and drapery at the head—"Ann the wife of William . . . . Also . . . ."

14. No. 15 in C.H.Y. has traces only of the name "Withers Fox."

15. On a broken stone in area of B. C., Bay 11—". . . th the . . . . Richard . . . . gent of ye . . rish of S. Nicholas who departed the first day of May, Anno Dom. 1630. R. G. Also . ."

16. In B. C. area, 4th Bay—"Here lieth the . . . of Richard . . . . of this . . . . . ."

17. In area of B.C. next to stone of Alice Bennett is a large rough slab broken into several pieces, whereon is a large Roman letter H nearly 5 inches in height.

Notes on Effigies and Monumental Stones, &c., now placed in the North East Transept.

I.

LARGE stone slab, with faint traces of an inscription in French, with a full-length figure of a Dignitary, incised; date circa 1300. There is a similar stone in York Minster. Now placed erect (in 1867) against W. Wall, near Bp: Stanbury's tomb.

II. The head of an early military effigy, found in 1857 during repair of S. E. Transept. Rawlinson, p. 22, describes what he saw in the N. Transept. Dingley, CLVI., gives a sketch of what appears to be the same.

III. Large Coffin lid, nearly perfect, erect against W. wall. See Plate III. Discovered during late Restoration. This fine slab measures 7 ft. 3 in height.

IV. Large slab with outlines of a Knight and Lady. Dingley gives a sketch which is inaccurate in details, as tho' drawn from memory. This stone was formerly in the vestibule of the Lady Chapel. It has been suggested that it may have been prepared for Sir John Devereux, K.G., who died in 1394.

A large portion of the border of this stone was certainly filled with thin plates of alabaster when I first saw it. These were loosened by the action of rain and frost during exposure for several years outside the walls of this Church. I never had a chance of preserving any of these fragments, as they were all taken or destroyed by unknown hands.

V. Fine stone effigy of a Layman in tunic and hood, with carved pateras in a hollow moulding on right hand side. The feet are gone. Hollis gives a full sized illustration of this effigy (Part IV., p. 5), which Mr. Bloxham assigns to the middle of Century XIV. The remains of ancient Altars are placed beneath this and adjacent effigies.

VI. Effigy of a Lady in a wimple, veil and gown with close fitting sleeves; on a plain slab with head on a large pillow. Front portion of head gone, dog at feet. Of rather later date than No. V.

VII. Effigy of a Lady in a veiled head dress, arms gone, head perfect. XIV. Century.

VIII. Fine effigy of a Layman in summer dress. Part of head and hands gone; bareheaded, in a tunic with close fitting sleeves and hood. Large dog at feet. Date middle of XIV. Century.

IX. Matrix of a brass, for a Dean or high ecclesiastic, under a canopy. Inscription formerly around the effigy. V. H. Guide, No. 28.

X. Effigy of a Lady, mutilated, head and feet gone. Laid on floor against N. wall.

XI. Part of a large incised slab; cross within a large circular design, foliated stem. An early example. On N. wall.

XII. Altar Tomb with Effigy more mutilated than any other in this Church. It represents a Dean or other high ecclesiastic, wearing a cassock, over which is the short surplice with sleeves, and over this the almucium or furred tippet. Nothing is known about this tomb or effigy which belongs to Century XV. It has been suggested that it may be that of Dean Borue, as the very beautiful effigy usually assigned to him is considered to be at least 100 years older than the date of his decease.

XIII. Fragment of a rich coffin slab, of XIII. Century work, with remains of a few words, probably "Ave Maria." The outer edge is chamfered; within is a beautiful flowing pattern, sunk one inch below surface, with a raised border. Found beneath adjacent Tomb, where other portions still remain. This and following fragments are on the E. wall.

XIV. Small portion of the head of an effigy. This came (as I believe) from Aconbury Church while undergoing restoration at the same time as this Cathedral.

XV. Small flat stone cross with chamfer on each side. An early English example; fleur de lis pattern within quatrefoil.

XVI. Portion of a slab, with cross and chevron pattern. Norman character. There used to be another similar stone in the C.H.Y.

XVII. Fragment of a coffin slab with large cross. This must have been a very large and fine stone. It is 2″8 across the head.

XVIII. Portions of an early coffin slab. A beautiful design, with traces of a few letters on the top.

XIX. Small portion of a slab. A most elegant example.

XX. Large and elaborate coffin lid, discovered during the restoration of the staircase to the Library, in external foundations; circa 1858. See Fasti Heref: 129.

XXI. Small portion of a faintly incised cross, with fleur de lis terminals.

XXII. In the wall between this Transept and the Lady Chapel is an arched recess with Ball Flower ornament. It is possible that Bishop Hugh Foliott, or John de Breton, may have been buried in this place. But the effigy of a Knight (circa A.D. 1300) was placed here in 1861, of whom nothing is known. The details of the armour, after exposure for many years in the Cloister area, cannot now be made out. Dingley (CLXXVII.) gives a sketch of this arch, containing the effigy of a bishop with mitre and staff; also this inscription, "Dominus Robertus Kilwardby, Episcop~ Herefordensis obiit A.D. 1282." Mr. J. G. Nichols well remarks that it is difficult to interpret this mural inscription. No such Bishop is on record. But this was the name of the Archbishop of Canterbury who resigned that See when he became a Cardinal A.D. 1278.

XXIII. Small tablet, now fixed on S. wall, formerly bearing brass work. Nothing is known about it.

Miscellaneous.

XXIV. Unknown. A Layman circa A.D. 1390. Fragments of a brass engraved in Haines' Manual, CLXIV., with the following note:—"The above engraving is copied from a rubbing taken at Hereford in August, 1843, by Revd. H. Addington. A portion of the shaft about 19 inches long, engraved with small circles, also part of the inscription—bearing the words 'de salme' —were then remaining." This appears to be the brass of the date 1393, (mentioned by Rawlinson, p. 138), conjectured erroneously to represent Dean Harold. The only remaining portions were fixed a few years ago on the W. wall of S. E. Transept. The small animal's head at the foot of the effigy was stolen in 1877.

XXV. Unknown. Dingley, CXLIV. says,—In the body (Nave) of the Cathedral are read these inscriptions in brass inlayd first this—Ih˜u fili dei miserere mei—in a scrowle, the figure in brass being wholly taken away. Another—Hic jacet Joh˜es . . . . . cives Civitatis Herefordiæ cui˜ ai˜e p˜picietur de˜. Amen.

XXVI. A Priest. XV. Century. Unknown. On an antient stone in the N. Transept near the effigies of a man in armour was the figure of a Priest whereof nothing now remains but his head, over which is this inscription on a brass scroll proceeding from his mouth—Deprecare regem celi pro me virgo Katerina adjuvare queso veni et salvare me festina. Dingley, CLXXXII., gives a copy and a sketch. R., 130, also mentions it.

NOTES AND ADDITIONS.

Frontispiece. Peter Baron de Grandisson is the correct title.

Page 10.—There is a word in line 11 of the mutilated inscription to Bishop Butler which has puzzled the most eminent scholars—de foso. It must be remembered that this tablet was repainted by an illiterate hand a few years ago. After these pages were printed, I determined to make an effort to solve the difficulty by removing the paint and examining the original lines beneath it. I have no doubt that the true reading is "Quiddam de ipso testaretur aliud." The tablet was altered accordingly, August 24, 1881.

Page 14.—Dean Oliver Lloyd died in Hereford 1625. Dean John Richardson died 1636, at Stretton or Hereford. These may have been buried in the Cathedral. It is not known where the following Deans were buried—

Edward Doughtie, 1616. Jonathan Brown, 1643.
William Leigh, 1809. Edward Mellish, 1830.

Dean Merewether describes the opening of this grave, when by his direction the plaster was removed from the doorway leading from the cloisters to the ancient Chapter House. "In prosecution of this object, the marks of the range of steps were distinctly traced, and on a level with the floor from which they sprung there appeared a grave or vault accurately built with well wrought stones, in which was contained a human skeleton in great measure decomposed, except the hair which was of a light sandy colour, appearing as fresh and firm in its texture as when first interred. There were the remains of one or two nails or screws, very much corroded which led to the conclusion that a wooden coffin had contained the body. But there was nothing to indicate the name of the person, altho' the central situation and the place itself bespoke him to have been a person of no mean rank in the fraternity."

Description of Illustrations.

PLATE I.

FRONTISPIECE.

Effigy of Peter Baron de Grandisson, ob: A.D. 1358.

ON the north side of the Ladye Chapel is a high Tomb surmounted with a rich canopy, panelled in seven divisions (G.P. No. 40). Within a recess lies a full-sized effigy which is in a very perfect state. On the head is worn a conical basinet attached to which is a camail, of mail of rings set edgewise. At the armpits are gussets of mail. Epaulieres of one plate each, brassarts, coudes and vambraces protect the shoulders, upper arms, elbows and lower arms. Gauntlets cover the hands. The cyclass covers the body armour, coming down lower behind than in front, with fringed skirts, open at the sides. Beneath this appears the gambeson and a skirt of mail; genouilleres, jambs and sollerets protect the knees, legs, and feet. Round the loins is a rich bawdrick or belt, from which depends a chain, to which a Dagger is fastened. A cross-hilted sword is on the left side. The hands are conjoined on the breast as in prayer. At the feet is a dog. This is one of those scarce monumental effigies shewing the cyclass, a linen or silken close fitting habit worn over the armour (which succeeded the surcoat) in the reign of Edward III. The tabernacle work above the effigy is very rich and chaste, and appears in design and workmanship to be later than the effigy.* In the upper portion are statuettes representing the Coronation of the B. Virgin by the second person of the Blessed Trinity. On the dexter side are King Ethelbert and St. John the Baptist; on the other side Archbishop Thomas à Becket, and Bishop Thomas de Cantilupe. The central figures forming part of the monument are mutilated, but the four effigies were discovered by Dean Merewether, secreted in the masonry which filled up the eastern archway of the choir.

Those who were well acquainted with this Cathedral before the great Restoration commenced, have stated that the position of the Shrine of St. Thomas was to be seen in the pavement so lately as A.D. 1842, when the stone floor was taken up. Several of these much worn stones are carefully preserved in the Library at the present time. Any one who recalls how in Westminster Abbey our Kings and Princes were buried around the Shrine of St. Edward, King and Confessor; and how at Canterbury, Edward the Black Prince, and Henry IV. and his Queen, Joan of Navarre, are placed in similar relation to the Shrine of St. Thomas á Becket, will be aware of the importance attached to such proximity to the Shrine of a Saint. We might then expect that a monument in this position could only be assigned to some person of the highest rank. For many years past authors and artists have "supposed" that this effigy represented one of the noble family of De Bohun, Earls of Hereford, who flourished, temp: Edward II. and III., without any historical evidence. The burial places of all the XIV. Century members of that great family can be accounted for.† (Dugdales Monasticon IV., 140). It is only recently, that what appears to be the true clue, has been obtained. In September, 1867, a letter appeared in the Hereford Journal‡ suggesting that the effigy represented Sir Peter, the father of Bishop Grandison. Further research leads to the conclusion that it represents Peter Baron de Grandisson, an older brother of that Bishop.

Graunson, Grantsone, (Adami Murimuthi Chronicon, p. 205), or Grandisson, now called Stretton Grandison, is the name of a Parish in this County, 8 miles E. of the City of Hereford. The family deriving a name therefrom was connected by ties of relationship with St. Thomas de Cantilupe.

Note * This description is taken from Mr. M. H. Bloxam's communication, No. 17 in Arch: Journ: XXXIV., 418.

† This effigy is assigned to Humphrey de Bohum, Earl of Hereford and Constable of England, who died A.D. 1321, by Hollis, in his "Monumental Effigies of Great Britain," Part IV., Plate 6.

‡ The learned writer was the Rev. Willam Dyke, B.D., formerly Fellow and Tutor of Jesus College, Oxford, who for 20 years was Rector of Bagendon, near Cirencester. He went to his rest Dec. 9, 1880.

It may be well, first of all, to state certain dates connected with the various removals of Bishop Cantilupe's remains.

1282 A.D. The Bishop died in Italy. His bones were deposited in the Ladye Chapel, and his heart sent to Ashridge, Buckinghamshire.

1288. Reliques of the Bishop removed to the North Transept.

1349 or 1350. The Shrine, &c., removed to the Ladye Chapel, on 8 Kal. Nov.

1382. Chapel of St. Anne in the Crypt beneath, described as "beneath the Shrine of St. Thomas." Harleian MS., 6726, f. 168, B.

1500 circa. The Chantry built by Bishop Audley on S. side of the Ladye Chapel is described in the Kalender of Obits as "juxta feretum Sancti Thome Confessoris." See Dean Merewether's Statement, p. 83. Also Rawlinson's Antiquities, 1717.

1545. In the month of October this year we may suppose that the Cantilupe reliques were removed thence according to the Order of Council for taking away Shrines and Images.

1617–33. Bishop Godwin found the stone work portion of the Shrine very nearly in its present position in N. Transept aisle.

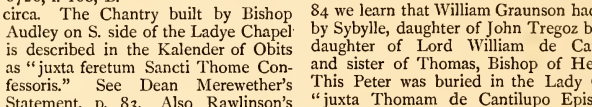
1676. Dingley saw the Shrine, made a drawing and described adjacent mural painting of Bishop Cantilupe.

1857. The stonework hitherto fixed against the wall, was taken down, cleaned and rebuilt with the utmost care under the direction of Sir G. G. Scott.

Leland states in his Itinerary, VIII., 86, "Petrus de Grandison miles in sacello S. Marie sepultus."

Who was Peter de G . . ? In folio 84 we learn that William Graunson had Peter by Sybylle, daughter of John Tregoz by Julia daughter of Lord William de Cantilupe and sister of Thomas, Bishop of Hereford. This Peter was buried in the Lady Chapel "juxta Thomam de Cantilupo Episcopum Herefordensem."

The following is the Pedigree of the De Grandissons :—



William Lord Cantilupe = Milicent, Countess d'Evreux.
I. Lord William Cantilupe.
II. Thomas de Cantilupe.
III. Julia = John Tregoz.
*William Lord Grandisson = Sibilla de Tregoz. buried in Dore Abbey (Leland)
Died A.D. 1335.
I. Peter, died 1358.
II. John, Bishop of Exeter. ob: 1369.
III. Otho, ob. 1359.
IV. Thomas, died young.
V. William, Canon & Archdeacon. ob: 1350.

John de Grandisson was Chaplain to the Pope, John XXII., and was one of his Privy Council, also "his Nuntio or Ambassadore, in matters of great weight and importance to the Emperor, to the Kings of Spain, France, England, and other the mightiest Princes of Christendome." He is said by Bp: Godwin to be descended from the Dukes of Burgundy.

The following circumstance strongly confirms the opinion now maintained that this effigy represents Peter Baron de Grandisson. During the preparation of these pages for the press, a copy of the present illustration was seen by Mr. W. Hamilton Rogers, the learned author of a large work on the "Ancient Sepulchral Effigies of Devon." He remarks, "your illustration is specially interesting to me, as it is almost a fac simile in arms, armour, and general appearance to Sir Otho de Grandisson in Ottery Church, which is figured among my effigies, as you would see at a glance."

The following valuable note from another learned genealogist throws much light on the case:—"Lord William Grandisson and his wife Sibilla died in 1335. They had 5 sons and 4 daughters. On the death of Lord William the title descended to his eldest son Peter, brother of the Bishop. This Peter Lord G. died in 1358, without male issue, as we find that the Bishop succeeded to the Peerage on the death of his eldest brother." Of the Bishop, Dr. Oliver thus writes:—"succeeding on the death of his brother Peter, Lord Grandisson, in 1358 to the peerage, he became the wealthiest Lord Bishop that Exeter had hitherto possessed."

Note * The obits of Lord William and his lady were kept on June 26 and Oct. 21.

If Leland's statement of the monument in Hereford Cathedral be accepted as a Peter Grandisson, it can not be other than that of Peter the Baron, as there is no other Peter in the Bishop's family, as his next brother Otho had a son named Thomas,* and both his younger brothers Thomas and William were ecclesiastics and therefore celebates.

Of the Bishop's elder brother, Peter, Dr. Oliver says he was buried in Hereford Cathedral. Query? Is the Hereford tomb the monument of Peter? Or, had Peter a son? If so he would probably be Sir Peter. But there is no record at hand of the issue of Peter the Baron, and if he had a son he must have died before his father, or the title could not have descended to the Bishop.

As there is no other layman's memorial in the Lady Chapel, we hesitate not to assign this fine monument to Peter Baron de Gandisson who was buried near the Shrine of his recently translated grand-uncle (with sculptures appropriate to the Chapel of the Virgin, and to the Saint who had found a brief repose in the Chapel of the Baptist in the N. Transept), which was now set in the most elevated part of the church which claimed Ethelbert, saint and king, for its Founder.

The illustration of this fine effigy† has been reduced by photography from a full sized drawing made by Albert Hartshorne, Esq., Sec. of the Royal Archæological Institute of Great Britain. The original drawing is in the possession of the Society of Antiquaries, London.

Rev. C. Boutell, when describing this effigy (Arch. J., xxvii., 176), says:—"This one has a peculiarity I will mention, the camail formed of chain work, and hung from the head-piece over the shoulders as a guard to the throat. It was attached to the helmet by little rings, which rings they found were liable to be cut: hence was adopted the method of sewing it on with a small leather interlace as it here appears."

The Arms of Grandison were Paly of 6 arg. and az. on a bend Gules, 3 eaglets displayed, or. The Bishop appears to have borne, for distinction, but 2 eaglets on the bend, but probably assumed the undifferenced coat on succeeding to the Barony.

Note * This Thomas was of full age at his father's death. He was also a Soldier and a Knight, and died without issue, 50th Edward III.

† The oolite panelling behind the effigy is fixed to the sandstone wall with iron plugs; thus leading to the supposition that there was a recess in this place before the Tomb was erected. There are no traces of heraldry or inscription, or colour. Length of effigy from head to feet, not including the helmet, 5 ft. 10 in.; width across elbows, 1 ft. 11 in. The head rests on two cushions. The roses on the canopy are double; on the belt and sword, single. A circular hole is sunk below the knees, 1¼ in. diameter; also a smaller hexagonal hole, which may have formed supports for the shield or other martial trophies of the deceased; or they were sockets for the partial support of a wooden hearse over the figure.

KETCH of an early coffin lid formerly in the Cathedral, circa 1800, from portfolio of Mr. Theophilus Lane.

2. Sketch by Dean Merewether of the tomb of Gilbert de Swinfield, Chancellor of the Choir, ob: A.D. 1297.

3. Chalice, paten and gold lace pattern from the same tomb.

4. Fine stone coffin lid now in N. E. Transept.

It is not known who bore this shield; perhaps Clifford. I am informed by Heralds' College that over twenty families or persons have born 3 Eaglets displayed on their shield.

The following account of Chancellor Swinfield's grave by Dean Merewether has been given in Fasti Heref: p. 198. The objects mentioned are preserved in the Library and glass case in the Canons' Vestry.

"Another grave was situated on the north aisle of the Choir opposite Bishop Stanbury's monument. The stone which covered it had been carved, or rather etched, in lines, representing an ecclesiastic in robes, but the constant wear of those who for centuries had passed over it had almost obliterated the whole. At about two feet from the surface was a large and thick stone which covered the whole of the grave, cemented down by a very tenacious mortar. After considerable trouble the stone was raised, when the first object which met the eye was a chalice and paten of pewter, having on the top of it the decomposed remains of a square silk covering, upon which had been placed a taper in the form of a cross, partially burnt at each of the four ends, and exhibiting still the remains of the wicks. On taking off the top of the chalice, there was observable a mark round the sides, which had been caused by the consecrated fluid it had contained. It was placed near the right shoulder of a skeleton, which was tolerably perfect. The hands had been placed over the breast in the attitude of prayer, but they had long since deserted the bones, and they had collapsed in a confused heap upon the breast, which had been decorated with a plaiting of gold lace, surrounded by an embroidered band, which had passed round the neck. Another piece of broader gold lace extended from this at right angles down to the feet, and yet adhered to the fragile remains of a silken texture, which, though now brown, had once been evidently black, and which had descended to the feet. These were covered on the upper part with the leather of shoes, the soles of which were gone. It was evident that no coffin of any kind had contained the body, from the still visible mark which had been left on the side of the grave by the pressure of the arm giving the outline of its form when shrouded. The hair was perfect, as were also the finger nails, which were remarkable from the filbert-like form which they retained, and the precision with which they seemed to have been cut. But the presence of the taper is the most striking feature in this instance, which to me is unique. But the other remains are still enclosed in their resting place of 500 years and upwards with as little disturbance as possible."

DESCRIPTION OF ANCIENT GRAVES, BY DEAN MEREWETHER.

I have a MS. written by the late Dean in the same year that the Music Room was taken down, giving interesting details of which a summary is now made. It was resolved to excavate the ground on the W. side of the Cloisters, remove a large quantity of gravel, and fill the excavation with earth accumulated in the Ladye Arbour. The commencement was made on the side nearest the Cathedral, and after passing through courses of rubbish and carved stones which could not be attributed to the fall of the W. Tower in 1786, the workmen came upon a stone coffin (at depth of 2 feet below level of Cloisters) composed of slabs of stone mortared together, covered by similar pieces set in mortar. On removing this, there appeared the remains of a human frame in a tolerable state of regularity, but the bones on being touched were found to have acquired a consistency like clay. The whole body had been enveloped in a winding sheet of very coarse texture,—sufficient remaining to shew the manner in which the body had been swathed therewith. But the most remarkable feature in this case was the appearance of a hazel stick or wand being placed by the left side of the body.* It was usual in early ages to distinguish, both when alive and dead, those whose piety and perseverance had carried them through the perilous adventures of a Pilgrimage to the Holy Land. On digging a little deeper another coffin of similar style and dimensions presented itself; the edges of the several stones forming the sides were carved with balls or bosses of about 3 inches in diameter. Upon further excavation, at a depth of less than 2 feet from the floor of the old Cloisters, 12 or 13 coffins were discovered without the appearance of the linen winding sheet, with remains in some cases of wood and nails which had fastened it. The Dean then proceeds to notice the striking appearance of a line of black—burnt materials—which runs in a regular stratum along the whole range of the excavation, which is said by the sextons and grave diggers to be observable in almost every part of the Cathedral precincts, at the depth of 6 or 7 feet. The Dean considers this to be accounted for by the incursions of Algar and Griffin, Prince of Wales, who in 1057 slew the seven Canons who defended the doors of the Cathedral which they then plundered and redneed to ashes.

Note * A few years ago one of these was preserved in the Library, and may still be there.

PLATE IV.

Tomb of Bishop Swinfield, ob: A.D. 1316.

ON the northern side of the N. East Transept there is a richly moulded arch over the Tomb of the once celebrated Bishop of this See, Richard de Swinfield.* In former times his name did not attract much attention, but recently the objects found in his Tomb, and the publication of his "Household Roll" (for the year 1289—90) have brought him into considerable prominence. Through the learned research of the late Rev. John Webb we have a remarkable insight into the habits of the Bishop and Clergy nearly 600 years ago. This Bishop lead a most active life, constantly visiting his clergy with a large retinue of officials, servants, and horses; while his numerous Manor houses demanded a constant change of residence, he found but little repose at any place. It is gratifying to find a favourable notice of this Bishop in a volume just published, which cannot fail to interest ecclesiastical students.†

"As early as 1281, Richard de Swinfield, Archdeacon of London, afterwards Bishop of Hereford, was appointed preacher in the Cathedral. He was learned in the sacred page, and an excellent preacher; a most approved theologian and a gracious preacher; beloved by Clergy and Laity of the City."

This tomb does not appear to have attracted any attention from artists or antiquaries, although there are many points of interest in its details.

As far as I can ascertain, no illustration has been published of this, the earliest Inscription in the Cathedral. Although there are no remains, nor record of an Effigy being attached to this tomb, I feel confident that there must have been one here originally, in all respects very rich and beautiful. How or when it was destroyed we know not; but with rich carving, colour, and gilding—the arch also having been enriched with colour—there is little doubt that this Tomb presented an incredibly rich appearance 560 years ago. The actual state at the present time is shewn in the illustration now given. The Tomb is constructed with a fine green sandstone, similar to the Cantilupe shrine. The stone coffin is a solid block, finely worked, being in a very perfect state. It commences 18½ inches below, and stands 6 inches above the floor line. The coffin lid, 5 inches in thickness, rests thereon, having no ornament or mark of any kind. The external dimensions are 8″ 1′ in length, 2″ 9′ breadth at W. end, 2″ 4′ at E. end. Sides 3½ inches thick. Above the coffin lid is a 6 inch course of rough masonry. The coffin was lowered 6 inches in 1861, thus for the first time exposing the rough stonework. Above is another course of well-dressed stone, on which there are traces of red colouring. Above this course is a large stone 8″ 5′ × 1″ 5½′ into which the inscription is cut; the letters—2¼ inches in height—are filled with a black bituminous substance, all around having been richly coloured originally. There are traces of small circles, but all other details have perished. The carved Crucifixion subject on the upper panel was studiously defaced in former ages. The surrounding foliage has been preserved by whitewash, which has been removed with great care, so that the original freshness is retained. The outer moulding is studded with a double row of small Ball Flower ornament, terminating on either side with the carved head of an ecclesiastic. Over the centre of the moulded arch there is a pierced trefoil which may have contained some lost ornament. The Ball Flower being carried up to form a gable, bearing crockets, now much mutilated, is terminated by a carved finial. The Ball Flowers on this and other Tombs form an interesting architectural study.

This Tomb was opened in the presence of the Dean, on July 30th, 1861. See Fasti Heref: 199, for full particulars. The body of the Bishop, encased in lead, has never been disturbed. The gilded head of the Pastoral Staff taken from this Tomb, was used as the model for the new Staff presented to Bishop Atlay in 1872. The Chalice and Paten* found on the right hand side of the Bishop's head are preserved in the Canon's Vestry. Fac similies have been manufactured in large numbers for colonial and missionary use by Pratt and Son, of London. The effigy of Giles de Braose was in this place for many years previously to its removal in 1860 to original position. In the illustration the details and irregularities of the inscription are carefully delineated.

Three Monumental Stones.

TONE panel inserted in the wall at the eastern end of Bishop Mayo's tomb in the S. aisle.

The original brass work was taken away upwards of two centuries ago. The President and Fellows of St. Mary Magdalene College, Oxford, provided Funds to restore this tomb in 1857. An attempt was then made to replace the lost metal work, resembling as closely as possible the original plates. The Bishop is represented in full vestments, in prayer or contemplation. A shield bearing his arms occupies the central panel. The Blessed Virgin is represented as seated, bearing in her arms the dead body of Christ. See page 5 for discription of this tomb.

2. Fragments of a beautiful early stone now fixed under the window in N. E. corner of the lesser Transept. See page 77, No. XIII.

3. Sketch of an incised stone which forms part of the base of Bishop Cantilupe's shrine. This was visible when the tomb was taken down in 1857. The incised lines were cut with much neatness, about ¼ of an inch in breadth. The stone is 6″1′ in length, having been worked at the head and two sides to adapt it to the shrine. It was my impression that this fine slab had been taken from an earlier grave; but I may be mistaken in this opinion. Each arm of the cross is 16½ inches, the outer ends being 2¾ inches. The central shaft is 2 inches to the outside the grooved lines. The cross tapers to 2 inches. See plate 4, Note 10.

PLATE VI.

Arms of Joseph Bailey, Jun., Esq., M.P.

HE beautiful Reredos in Hereford Cathedral was erected as a Public Memorial to the above-named in 1850, after having represented this County for more than nine years. This was one of the earliest adaptations of revived Ecclesiastical art to this sacred purpose. It was designed by N. J. Cottingham, Jun., and executed in Caen stone by W. Boulton. On the reverse side facing the Ladye Chapel the entire surface is covered with diaper, terminating in a continuous panelling, containing shields, coloured with the armorial bearings of the deceased. See "Visitor's Handguide," No. 95, for further details

Bailey—Arms, Argent between two bars 3 annulets, in fesse, gules, all between as many martlets of the last.
Motto—Libertas.

The illustration, with all faults or defects is a fac simile of the shields on the Reredos. No attempt has been made to alter or improve what is there.

PLATES X. & XI.

King Ethelbert. St. Thomas, of Hereford.

Brass Plates formerly on the sides of the effigy of Archdeacon Rudhale, ob: 1476.

NEAR the centre of the Choir in front of the Ancient High Altar, in the pavement a large and handsome brass, 8 feet long, covered the remains of Archdeacon Rudhale, who was there buried. G. Plan, 128.

Ding., CXXXVIII., gives a sketch conveying a good general idea of its appearance about 200 years ago. The greater part of the effigy of this Archdeacon, measuring 4″ 2′, has lately been recovered from Mr. J. G. Nichols' collection. It represents him in a skull cap, and wearing a richly embroidered cope. On either side was a selection of figures of saints, 10 in number. An embattled entablature surmounted the canopy, and an inscription (see Page 60) surrounded the whole in a single line. All the portions that remain are fixed on the W. wall of the S.E.T. (No. 63). Of the small side figures we have—1. St. Ethelbert. 2. St. Thomas of Canterbury. 3. St. Thomas of Hereford. 4. St. John Evangelist. 5. St. Katherine. Two have been restored lately. 6. St. David. 7. St. Anne. The missing figures are supposed to be—8. S. George. 9. St. Michael. 10. St. John Baptist. All these had their names subscribed. The lower part of Plate XI. is lost. and the surface of all the plates is much worn. The illustrations are faithful copies of the originals. Plate XI. being actually the size of the original, and Plate X. $^{4}/_{5}$ ditto, and are selected on account of their local importance.

PLATE XII.

Fac simile of brass effigy of William Porter,

Canon Residentiary and Præcentor, also Warden of New College, Oxford, ob: A.D. 1524. Half real size.

THIS curious brass, formerly lying between the 2nd and 3rd Pillars on the N. side of the Nave (G.P. 113) with portions of the canopy, have lately been restored from Mr. J. G. Nichols' collection.

I cannot do better than transfer to these pages the remarks of the late Rev. Herbert Haines, who had examined the whole of these brasses before he wrote his last description of them in 1871. He says, "Dingley has given a sketch of the brass (CXLIII.), but it is evidently very inaccurate, as the deceased is represented as wearing a chasuble under his cope; he holds a chalice with a wafer inscribed I.S.H., a very unusual arrangement with effigies in canonical vestments. (A.) The centre of the canopy is all in one plate, and consists of 3 small pediments drawn in perspective, as if the centre one projected forwards; above under a similar canopy groining, is a large representation of the Annunciation; the angel Gabriel holds a sceptre, and a pot of lilies is between him and the Virgin. (B.) From the figures issue two twisted scrolls inscribed respectively, "AVE. GRACI(A) PLENA. DNS. TECUM. and ECCE. ANCILA. DNI. FIAT. MICI. SCDM. VERBU. TWM. The letters are early specimens of Roman capitals, and the background represents masonry. The centre and highest finial of the canopy is formed of 3 faces, and apparently served as a bracket to a representation of the martyrdom of some saint, as two angels of similar style to the figure of Gabriel remain. The supporting shafts of the canopy were composed of 8 or 10 saints in niches, with their names subscribed. Seven are left. On the dexter side, St. Thomas as a Bishop, St. George slaying the dragon, St. Richard, (as a Bishop in dalmatic and cope) S. Katherine. On the sinister side, St. John Baptist, St. Michael, and St. Leonard. The figures of Saints Ethelbert, Edward, and Mary Magdalene, probably completed the series.

Two shields, with the arms of Porter quartered, and small fragments of the canopy are left. The surrounding inscription‡ (See page 56) is preserved by Rawlinson and Dingley; it seems to be partly imitated from that of Dean Chawndeler, as it minutely states the time of decease in a very unusual manner.

The brass is interesting as being the only remaining instance of a canopy with the Annunciation depicted in a style similar to those formerly in old St. Paul's Cathedral on the brasses of Dean Eyre, 1400, and J. Newcourt, 1485, after which patterns it may have been directed to be made.

Note A.—There are other similar examples at Cobham, Buckland—Herts, and Higham Ferrers.

B.—Mr. Haines fortunately took a rubbing of this most interesting plate, of which he gives a small illustration—Plate VII.—in his communication made to the Journal of the British Arch. Assoc. for 1871. This brass plate has not yet been restored to Hereford Cathedral. It seems to be again lost.

In 65 the 3 greyhounds heads on per pale can be assumed to have been painted on same part of 66. The colours indicated on 57—70, according to existing traces, will give the key to 65 and 66. The crosses and ermine in 70 were doubtless painted on all the quarterings of 65 and 66. 67 is not in larger shields.

Note.—The arms remaining on a few of our Episcopal Monuments are described but not illustrated in these pages. That has been completely and correctly done in Fasti Herefordenses, except in the following shields:—Bishop Bennet bore quarterly two coats, viz., Argent a cross between 4 demi lions rampant gules. R. Meyrick, of Goodrich Court. The whole of that celebrated collection of armour having been removed to South Kensington for sale, it is not known where these objects are now preserved.

Early Coffin Lids.

Notes on Fragments of Brasses,

RESTORED A.D. 1880.

IT was well known among antiquaries that the late Mr. J. Gough Nichols possessed numerous fragments of brasses from this Cathedral and other Churches, which had been sold as old metal. It had long been my wish to recover them. In 1867 Mr. Nichols visited this County, when preparing Dingley's MS. for publication. On making his acquaintance I brought this subject before him. In a letter dated March 21, 1868, he writes, "I am anxious to restore to your church such fragments of sepulchral brasses as can be proved to have come from it. I have intended to propose it long since, but I am not sure what I have to offer. Mr. Haines has inaccurately appropriated the fragments, as he has now explained to me, but I think I shall be able to return portions of the brasses of Rudhall and Porter. Have you their stones ready for their reception? If not you would put them against the wall." In another letter, April 12, 1870, he writes, "I find that in page 180 (Fasti Heref.) you have announced my intention to restore the fragments that came to my father from Mr. Gough. It would have been a greater pleasure if you could have recorded it as an accomplished fact. I must make it my business to identify them and see that they are all preserved."

Shortly after this Mr. Haines examined the brasses which were nailed to the walls of Mr. Nichols' office, in Parliament Street, Westminster. Receiving Mr. Haines' written and verbal description, I was prepared to identify the Hereford brasses. A day was fixed for that purpose, but illness prevented Mr. Nichols from coming up from Dorking to Parliament Street. In February, 1871, he writes, "I am sorry that you have not found me here, and that we cannot hunt up the Hereford brasses together. If you have no other prospect of re-visiting London soon, we can perhaps make some other arrangement." The death of Mr. Nichols occurred soon after.

Thus the matter fell through, until the visit of the Arch. Institute in 1877, when the subject was revived. Solely through the assistance of Stephen Tucker, Esq., Somerset Herald, 39 brasses, of which some were found not to belong to Hereford, were obtained from the executors of Mr. Nichols in November, 1880. The only stipulation made was that a plate should record the circumstances of their restoration. They have been fixed chiefly on the W. wall of the N.E.T., with the following inscription, on a small bronze plate:—

Vetera hæc Monumenta

Notes on the Preaching turns assigned by the Statutes to the Members of this Cathedral.

To the Dean—Easter-Day.
,, Præcentor—Christmas-Day.
,, Archdeacon of Hereford—The Purification of St. Mary the Virgin.
,, Archdeacon of Ludlow—The Circumcision of Christ.
,, Treasurer—The Epiphany.
,, Chancellor of the Choir—The Ascension Day.

The Prælector preaches on the Tuesday Mornings in Advent and Lent, and on all Saints' Days not assigned to the Dignitaries.

The Prebendaries preach on the 28 Sundays after the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary (Good Friday being reckoned a preaching turn instead of Easter-day), as indicated in the above list by figures preceeding each name. The Minor Canons preach on the Holy Days after Easter, Whit-Sunday, and Christmas Day.
